FRENCH AIRSHIP IS PLUNGED INTO ENGLISH CHANNEL

CALAIS, France, July 19.—Hubert Latham, the aeronaut, to-day attempted to fly across the English channel. When he had covered but a part of the distance his aeroplane became unmanageable and plunged into the sea.

Latham was picked up by the French destroyer Harpon and brought to Calais. Great crowds welcomed him, and when he landed he was mobbed by dozens of girls and young women who kissed him and embraced him. He was wildly cheered and hailed as a hero.

Latham showed great coolness. When he was picked up by the warship he was sitting on the floating aeroplane calmly smoking a cigarette.

"I will try again," were his first words. The aeroplane rose gracefully and made a good beginning of the perilous journey.

More Thrilling of Flights.

The flight to-day was the most thrilling ever attempted. Latham had planned it weeks ago, fully realizing the dangers, but willing to risk them in the interests of science and for the $5,000 prize offered by the London Daily Mail.

Crowds gathered to see the daredevil aviator make his start. Wireless bulletins were flashed every minute from San Gatte and told of the beginning of the journey. Latham started well, swinging his machine in wide circles before starting on the straight away course for England.

Soon were gone that the channel had vanished from sight, and those who gathered at Dover began to scan the horizon anxiously for the first glimpse of the aeronaut. Latham said that the accident was due to the motor slowing down. The machine is not damaged, and will soon be ready for another attempt.

Is Rival of the Wrights.

No exploit in aeronautics since the early days of the Wright experiments in France had aroused such universal interest as the across-the-channel flight.

Hundreds of spectators gathered daily at San Gatte hoping to see Latham depart upon his voyage. To many of those who gathered to view the flight it meant nothing more than a dare at death, but to others it meant the solution of a problem of international importance. With the possibilities of flight across the channel mean a new method of invasion for England or France.

CITY LIGHTING CONTRACT FAILS

Company's Bond Not Filed, and Emerson May Resort to City Plant — Two Other Ways Open, He Says.

The Greater Boston Illuminating Company failed today to file the $50,000 bond necessary for it to obtain a five-year street lighting contract awarded recently by Superintendent of Streets Guy C. Emerson. The bond was due to be filed at noon to-day.

With the company's failure to file a bond the city of Boston is faced with a new problem as to how its streets shall be lighted after September 15 next, when the present contract with the Rising Sun Lighting Company expires.

Three ways are open, according to Superintendent Emerson:

1.—Grant the Greater Boston Company an extension of time in which to negotiate its bond.

2.—Award the contract to the Rising Sun Company which bid $245,000 a year, or $12,000 a year more than the Greater Boston Company.

3.—Establish a municipal lighting system.

Representatives of the Rising Sun Company were in City Hall just before noon to-day trying to see Superintendent Emerson. The purpose of their call they would not divulge.

Emerson, meantime, was undergoing an interview at the hands of Finance Commissioners Sullivan, Moors and Isley in the new commission's quarters in the Tremont Building.

Mr. Emerson Explains.

"There was no hot shot exchanged," he said as he left the grill room. "They simply wanted to know what I was doing with regard to the street lighting contract, and I told them. What I told them is newspaper history."

Rumor at City Hall to-day has it that the hitch in the arrangements for the street lighting contract was caused by the failure of the Massachusetts Bonding Company to guarantee the enterprise until the lighting company's newly incorporated concern had $250,000 in "hold it" cash. The bonding company at first insisted that at least $125,000 be shown and later, it is said, raised the figure to $250,000.

Superintendent Emerson is puzzled as to what he shall do with the $5,000 certified check which the Greater Boston officials filed with him as a guarantee of good faith when the submitted their bids. Under the law, it is said, the city can hold the check.

Terms of the Contract.

The contract to the Greater Boston Illuminating Company was awarded last Thursday. The contract provides for lighting the "side streets, public alleys and parks" of Boston for five years, beginning September 15, 1909. The Greater Boston Company bids $238,000 a year. The Rising Sun Company, which does the work now under a one-year contract, was the only other bidder, at $248,000. The Rising Sun now receives $280,000.

If the bond had been filed to-day the contract would have gone to the Mayor for his approval. The Finance Commission objected to the award of the contract until it has finished an investigation of the street lighting problem. A report from the commission is expected soon.

RAIN STOPS TENNIS PLAY AT LONGWOOD

While the big Longwood tennis tourney was under way this morning the rain came down in torrents and play was called off till 2 o'clock this afternoon. The delay will help the New Yorkers who came over on the Yale, which reported by wireless that, owing to the fog, she would not be able to land the tennis experts from Goshara, including Champion Larned, till noontime. Several of the early matches were nearly completed when the rain came. R. D. Little, last year's winner, had two sets to his credit over George Besis of Boston in the opening round of play.

THE WEATHER.

Fair and slightly cooler to-day. Tuesday fair; light to moderate northwesterly winds.

CRANE CALLED TO AID TAFT'S TARIFF FIGHT

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The full effect of the President's demand for free raw materials in the tariff bill is not limited to the removal of the duty on those products alone. If hides, furs and oil are placed on the free list in order to carry out the pledge to equalize duties, the rates upon the articles manufactured from these raw materials must be reduced. It is in this respect that the President and those who are supporting his position believe that the advantage to the consumer from revision will come.

Senator Crane of Massachusetts has been recalled to Washington to use his influence to line up senators in favor of the President's plan of free raw materials, as the hardest fight is likely to be with the upper branch.

Because of the necessity of changing the rates on manufactured articles to conform to the reduced rates on raw materials, if the President wins his fight, the conference will have to delay action on several schedules while the President gets enough votes to carry out his purpose. So far as the House is concerned, the President is practically certain of having his backing.

Under the rules governing conferences on tariff bills, the conferees cannot go outside of rates lowered or increased by the Senate. In other words, if the President desired some of the duties not in dispute by the conferees lowered, it would be necessary for the conferees to obtain the consent of the House and Senate to take such action. Leaders in the House and Senate do not believe this will be done, because to bring back the bill for amendment might open up the entire subject and keep Congress here at least another month.

Representative Fordney of Michigan, one of the House conferees, is opposed to free rough lumber and will do what he can to maintain the Senate increase of fifty cents. The House placed a duty of $1 and the Senate raised it to $1.50. Rough lumber would have been placed on the free list had the Democrats in the House and Senate voted for it.

OFFICIAL OF SUGAR TRUST ARRAIGNED

NEW YORK, July 19.—John Mayer, one of the six American Sugar Refining Company officials indicted for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, to-day pleaded not guilty before Judge Hand in the United States Circuit Court. Mayer was in Europe when the other defendants pleaded. The indictments charge an illegal loan of $1,250,000 to Adolph Segal, which resulted in the closing of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company. It was alleged.

FINED FOR HURLING DISHES AT BRIDE.

The wedding of a friend was too much for Michael Jernofski of Norwood, who paid a $10 fine before Judge Grover in the Dedham court to-day for beating his bride, and also $10 for disturbing the peace. Jernofski was married a week ago. The couple went to the wedding of two friends Saturday, and when they got back home Michael felt so badly that he began to break chairs and dishes. He also struck his wife, and she called the police. When Michael paid his $20 in fines and the bride took a car back to Norwood, both apparently happy again.

EMPLOYE AT COURT HOUSE DROPS DEAD.

Thomas Carrow, the gardener at the Middlesex County court house, East Cambridge, dropped dead while at work about the grounds of the place to-day. Heart failure is supposed to be the cause of death. Carrow has been employed about the court house two years. He lived in North Cambridge.

OVERCOME AT FIRE.

BRADDOCK, Pa., July 19.—Three persons were injured, a dozen children overcome by smoke and $15,500 damage was caused to-day by a fire on Washington avenue.

WORLD RACER SET BACK BY ENGLISH FOG

Dense fog on the English coast to-day put a crimp in the BOSTON AMERICAN'S leading team's chances in the around-the-world race.

The Kronprinzessin Cecilie, on which were Leo W. and Nathan Sallinger, representing the New England flying squadron, arrived at Plymouth, three hours late and thereby missed connections for the Orient which will result in adding another week to the time the Sallinger party must consume in the flight around the earth.

The unexpected news was contained in the following cable:

Plymouth, Eng., July 19, via Cable. Missed connections. Cecilie three hours late. Captain did utmost. Well. Smooth trip. Enjoying immensely. Regards. SALLINGER.

The failure of Sallinger to make connections puts an entirely different aspect on the race. The fight now lies between Morris, who is somewhere in Russia to-day, and Waltman, who is on the Pacific Ocean, en route to Yokohama. If the Empress of Japan, on which Waltman and Dr. Noyes, his escort, are sailing, makes the new schedule of thirteen days across the Pacific on the trip, then the odds will be all in favor of his capturing all of the honors.

It will be a question of hours and minutes between Morris and Waltman, but conditions favor the boy on the westward-bound journey, this despite the handicap of a day imposed by the calendar.

"Our girls" reached London to-day in their sight-seeing tour of Europe, and in all probability will meet the Sallinger party during their three days' stay in the British metropolis. A cable from Walter H. Woods, who is in charge of "our girls," says that all in the party are having a good time. In the party are Ida M. Sullivan and Mrs. Daniel Sullivan, Grace B. Foss and Mrs. F. C. Foss, Elvira Haid and Mrs. C. H. Haid and Adrian M. Bay and Maud Schearer.

TAKAHIRA SAYS HE INTENDS TO RETURN

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 19.—Ambassador Takahira issued a statement at the Japanese Embassy this afternoon in reply to published statements regarding the intended movements of the Ambassador. After expressing his appreciation of American interest in his contemplated trip, he says: "In regard to my future movements, particularly as to whether I shall return here or not, I do not desire to allow any speculation misleading to the public, and I wish to say once for all that nothing will be decided in this respect until my arrival in Japan. Personally it is my intention to come back here in the Fall."

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, Cleveland, July 19.—Two games between the famous "Speed Boys" and the Naps set the Cleveland fans by the ears this afternoon, and one of the biggest Monday crowds of the season gathered here this afternoon to see the fun.

The closeness of the American League race for the first four positions in the standing makes every game important. Both managers to-day were hoping that they would win both battles, but both men are veterans in baseball, and they did not count their chickens before they hatched.

Uncle Cy Young, the elongated Falkenburg and Berger were the pitchers that Lajoie counted on to deliver the goods for his side, while Lake has Arellanes, Wood and Burchell under cover for the Red Sox.

REV. DR. HUNTINGTON DYING AT NAHANT

Reports of the condition of Rev. William R. Huntington, D. D., rector of Grace Church, New York, who is ill at Nahant, took a decided unfavorable turn to-day, and there seems slight chance of his recovery. Royal Robbins, his son-in-law, at whose Summer home Dr. Huntington is ill, said to-day: "Dr. Huntington is very seriously ill. There has been no special change, but he is gradually growing weaker. There is very slight chance for his recovery." Dr. Huntington has been ill for some time with intestinal trouble, but up to to-day the reports of his condition have indicated that he was slowly recovering.

ONE DEAD, ONE HURT IN PISTOL FIGHT

NEW YORK, July 19.—One man was killed, another fatally injured and a third wounded when he escaped in a three-cornered pistol fight to-day in East One Hundred and Fifteenth street. The men were Giuseppe Juliano of No. 239 East One Hundred and Twentieth street, shot to death; Nicole Mellio, same address, fatally wounded, and Jack Zigarcha, who was wounded but escaped. The three men were partners in a saloon, and quarreled over the profits.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, July 19—Clark Griffith sent his Reds into the fray against the Doves plumb full of ginger, for he wants to get the best of the series and in order to do so needed to-day's game.

The three players, Dean, Hickle and Brown, who were traded for Bates and Starr, were on hand. Shean started regular work right off the reel and was at second base in place of Dahlen.

President John Dovey received a telegram from Siner, the second sacker, that Mike Bowerman dug up on his recent scouting trip, which says that Siner will join the Doves immediately if wanted. Dovey wired that he was certainly wanted and that means that the player will be on the job soon. He has been at Shelburn, Ind., playing second for that team.

A trade of twirlers was pulled off by the Doves this morning, and Tommy McCarthy quit the ranks of the locals. He was exchanged for Pitcher Evans of the Hartford, Connecticut League, Club. Evans will report to the Doves early in September, at the close of the Connecticut League season.

SWEARS "SANDY" FERGUSON SWORE

"Sandy" Ferguson, the pugilist, was to day arraigned before Judge Cutler in the Chelsea Police Court charged with using profanity. Mrs. Mary Paine, wife of William Paine, a former heavyweight pugilist of Ocean avenue, Revere, alleges that on the night of July 5 "Sandy" was outside her house and was using profane language. The case was continued until July 26.

COURTS CLOSE TO HONOR DEAD JUDGE

Judge Hitchcock, sitting in the Superior Civil Court, adjourned court at noon out of respect for the memory of the late Judge Francis Almon Gaskill, whose funeral took place to-day in Worcester. For the same reason Judge Richardson, presiding in the Equity Motion Court, held no session this afternoon. All offices in the courthouse were closed at 2 o'clock.

ELOPER REPENTS IN WIRELESS

A wife's repentance by wireless is the latest development to-day in the case of Mrs. Joseph F. Lancaster of the Hemenway Chambers, who sailed on the steamer Baltic from New York Saturday at the same time that "Count" Guido Costarelli de Gregorio took passage.

Dispatches from New York to-day say that Mrs. Caroline Connable of the Chesterfield apartments, No. 321 Common wealth avenue, Boston, mother of Mrs. Lancaster, has received messages in New York by wireless from the Baltic telling her that Mrs. Lancaster already regrets what she has done, that she is doubting the sincerity of the "Count" and that she would have nothing to do with him if it appeared that his protestations of love were merely pretexts to get control of her wealth.

This is the first case recorded of a repentance by wireless. In view of the prominence of the principals and the sensational nature of the case, this intervention of wireless telegraphy is regarded as a most striking development in the rapidly growing history of the marconigrams.

The wireless messages have also informed Mrs. Connable and other relatives of Mrs. Lancaster that the boat's crew will be taken of Mrs. Lancaster aboard the Baltic that strict watch will be kept over the "Count," to prevent his executing any further malevolent influence over the woman, and that the "Count" will be foiled in any scheme he has regarding her.

Mother Sends Wireless.

The comforting assurance was also conveyed that friends of Mrs. Lancaster were also on the Baltic who will give her safety and attention.

Carefully worded replies were sent by wireless to Mrs. Lancaster by Mrs. Connable and other relatives, according to the

FIND ROTTEN BRIDGE GIRDERS

Hardpine girders so hotten on their upper surface that they could be crumbled by hand for two or three inches were discovered by workmen repairing the Harvard Bridge to-day. Many of the spikes used in fastening them were imbedded only in rotten wood.

There have been reports that the piling of the bridge was defective and that work was to be done to it at this time. That is why the Doves' park will be closed now to-day to put the draw in safe condition.

A large force of men is tearing up the flooring and the street car-rails and removing the girders, preparatory to the rest work of repairing the structure. By to-night all of the deck of the draw should be clear of the rails, so that when it is swung the draw around so that it will come directly over the pier structure sometime to-morrow, to give opportunity for the crew of the Boston Bridge Works to put in sets of six piece each under the four corners of the superstructure, where it rests on the turning mechanism of the draw.

FRANCIS E. BACON ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

NEW BEDFORD, July 19.—Francis E. Bacon, a retired business man of Boston, who has a Summer home at Matteponsett, is in St. Luke's Hospital in this city in a critical condition as the result of a bullet wound inflicted by himself. A man through the house Mr. Bacon succeeded in sending a nurse who was calling from his room at his Matteponsett home for a long enough time to allow him to get his revolver and discharge a shot into his mouth.

STEAL $45 IN RAZORS.

The police are looking for the men who broke into the barber shop of Alack Pushon at No. 153 Causeway street and stole $45 worth of razors and other instruments. They also made an attempt to enter the wholesale liquor store of P. Ronan & Co. next door, but were

WOMAN IS SHOT IN RIOT

BUTLER, Pa., July 19.—The first bloodshed in the strike of the Standard Steel Car Company's men resulted to-day in the first shooting of one and dangerous injuries to four other men and one woman. Thirteen arrests have been made.

The injured are: Andrew Boyas, a striker, shot through the abdomen, at the Butler Hospital in a critical condition; William Hess, State trooper struck with a plank, severely bruised and cut; Charles J. Smith, State trooper, thrown to curb and sustained deep cut on knee cap; Mrs. Esther Pagnelli, wife of a storekeeper, severely injured by broken glass; John Succes, a striker, scalp cut open; John Dimonds, a spectator, struck on head with a beer bottle.

Capt. Pitcher's command to the mob to disperse was met by a volley of shots, beer bottles and stones. When the Boyt shot rang out the troopers were ordered to charge and rode their horses right into the crowd of men, women and children. This terrified the mob, and they scattered in all directions, throwing stones as they ran.

The loss resulting from the strike is enormous. Nearly 5,000 men are idle. Granting that each man made $1 a day, some idea of the loss to merchants is gained. The plant has a capacity of about 100 cars a day. Those sell for an average price of $1,000 each.

Railroads in need of cars are forced to wait until the strike has been ended and must make shift to handle freight.

Street car companies who want rolling stock must get along without it until the workmen are ready to resume their jobs. The county must continue to pay at least $1,000 a day until the works was operated without the presence of deputy sheriffs. All figured, the loss caused by the strike will reach at least $90,000 a day.

LAD KILLED ON ELEVATOR

Harry Pernokoff, five years old, was killed by the freight elevator in the Edwards Building at No. 10 Lyman street, West End, this noon, and his brother, Nathan, a boy of eight, was saved from a similar fate by the promptness of J. Marcovitz employed in the building. How the accident happened is not plain but the two boys were playing with the elevator and had started it upward. Harry's head was crushed and his body cut where the elevator had rolled him against the brick wall and then dropped him to the bottom of the well.

Marcovitz heard screams from the elevator well and on looking down he saw the lift coming up and Nathan trying to get out of it as it passed a window ledge. Marcovitz pulled the wires which stopped the motor and then climbed in and took Nathan to the floor.

"My brother is dead, he's killed!" cried Nathan and before anyone could question him he ran from the building.

Looking down the elevator well, Marcovitz saw the body of Harry in a heap at the bottom. He cabled the police and the body was taken out and carried to the office of Dr. E. B. Whitehouse at No. 8 Stanford street, where it was learned that the boy had died instantly.

The parents of the dead boy, who live at No. 24 Washington street, are prostrated.

TRIBESMEN AND SPANIARDS BATTLE

MADRID, July 19.—Fragmentary dispatches from Morocco to-day indicate that a severe engagement has been fought between all or part of the 8,000 Spanish troops dispatched there last week and the revolted tribesmen. Three Spanish officers are said to have fallen, and the bulletins indicate that losses on the part of the Moroccans were heavy. It is believed here that the rebels entered

100 HAPPY TOURISTS, GUESTS OF AMERICAN, RETURN TO BOSTON

The BOSTON AMERICAN tourists on the sightseeing tours of America are back at home to-day, after a week of solid enjoyment.

There were 100 happy passengers on board the New England special of the Boston & Albany railroad, when it pulled into the South Station at 10:30 a. m. to-day, all members of the BOSTON AMERICAN sightseeing party. There was cheer after cheer for the BOSTON AMERICAN as the special Pullman sleeping cars gave up their happy loads and the individuals plumped into the arms of waiting friends and relatives. Before separating, the tourists formed the BOSTON AMERICAN Touring Club, with F. C. Smith, of Oak Bluffs, as president, and ordered a vote of thanks to the BOSTON AMERICAN for the pleasant and enjoyable vacation afforded them.

Boys, girls, escorts and chaperones all united in praise of the manner in which the tour was handled and the manner in which they were treated in New York, Washington and Niagara Falls. The last day of the trip—Sunday—was spent in Niagara Falls, and it was there that the BOSTON AMERICAN Touring Club was formed at the International Bank. Among the things of the club is a reunion next winter and a celebration on the first anniversary of the tour.

In the party were twenty-five boys and twenty-five girls, each accompanied by an escort or chaperone, making up a party of 100. The party left Boston on a week ago, two and one-half days being spent in New York, a half-day in Philadelphia, two days in Washington and a day at Niagara Falls. Not one of the many historic spots in those places was missed. It was a continuous merry-go-round all the while the party was away, with automobiles, carriages and other modes of sightseeing all along the line.

Trip Pleased Everyone.

The party was in charge of Frederick W. Briggs, of Marston's Touring Agency, all through the trip, and it was a happy family from the very start. Some formed individual parties and at various points went sight-seeing on their own hook, or visited relatives in the different cities. Everything possible was done by the BOSTON AMERICAN to give all the times of their lives.

F. C. Smith, president of the BOSTON AMERICAN Touring Club, who is town clerk of Oak Bluffs, and who was on the trip as the escort of William B. Hudson's ship, made the following statement to-day from the South Station:

"The members of the party individually and collectively want to thank the BOSTON AMERICAN for the opportunity afforded them on the AMERICAN sight-seeing trip. I have been delegated as spokesman, but cannot adequately carry out this duty because I cannot find words for all that I would say of the manner in which the trip was conceived and carried out.

"It was a great trip. It cannot help but prove beneficial and instructive to the youngsters who, in addition to a most enjoyable vacation, were given an opportunity to see for themselves the many spots of historic and artistic interest of which they had heretofore only read or studied about in the school rooms.

"We will not soon forget the BOSTON AMERICAN or the trip, either. It was equally invaluable to the elders and to their young charges, and we will all be the better off for the experience."

One Happy Family.

Mesdames O'Kane, McDonald, Coogan, Rakowsky and Stahl spoke for the women of the party in loud praise of the vacation trip. Mrs. Coogan, who went as chaperone for Marion F. Coogan, her daughter, summed up the situation pleasantly and briefly as follows:

"The trip was a treat; it was great. We all had a great time and will not soon forget the BOSTON AMERICAN and the reception given our children. It was a great, happy family."

The last night's ride in the special Pullman sleepers made a big hit with the party, particularly with the children. They declared that they preferred the sleeper to the hotels, though on all sides there was talk of the hotel accommodations. The party was quartered at the Brondway Central Hotel in New York, Normandie Hotel at Washington and International Hotel at Niagara Falls.

The children in the returning party today were: Robina Atkins, Wollaston; Ida Bardeman, East Boston; Tena Glaser, Malden; Celia Shwartz, Boston; Elizabeth Rubin, Boston; Grace F. Cohen, Roxbury; Gladys Waters, Somerville; Edna I. Murphy, Providence; Catherine Tyle, Roxbury; Ida Sacks, Boston; Eldeine M. Young, Atlantic; Ida M. Edmund, Malden; Ella K. Kesberg, Everett; Ida Rakowsky, Salem; Elizabeth Kunitsky, Boston; Marion F. Coogin, Boston; Alice C. Muir, Worcester; Gladys Mason, East Boston; Lillian M. Green, Boston; Adrienne Keefe, Dorchester; Tress Wiley, Roxbury; Annie T. Bergin, Bristol, Rhighton; Jessie Sutcliffe, South Boston; May Brody, East Boston; Pauline Liebenstein, Manchester, N. H.

Among those in the party were: Bernard S. O'Kane, Newton; Carl Lagerquist, Providence; Philip Maguire, Newport, R. I.; Chester W. Hooper, Allston; William R. Blankenship, Oak Bluffs, Mass.; Richard L. Wentworth, Lynn; Albert Dupiam, Jamaica Plain; John P. Corcoran, Boston; Aubrey Ericson, Dorchester; B. Kerstein, Boston; Oscar Petschke, Jr., Providence; David Greer, Boston; Herold A. Cass, Roxbury; Leon W. Hughes, Boston; Harrison C. Perkins, South Braintree; Roger W. Conway, Somerville; Abraham Rogers, Whitinsville; Leon A. Meerle, Dorchester; George Cohen, Chelsea; Linwood Bunford, Cambridge; Lincoln Holmes, Belmont; Edward T. Simpson, Somerville, and George R. McDonald, Roxbury.

MARY E. STEWART, GIRL WITH SUTTON THE NIGHT HE DIED

ANNAPOLIS, Md., July 19.—The second inquiry into the death of Lieutenant James N. Sutton, of the marine corps, who was shot to death on the grounds of the marine barracks on October 12, 1907, began to-day.

Evidence of the feeling existing between the members of the Sutton family and the naval officers alleged to have been implicated in his death was furnished before the opening of the court, when Mrs. Rose Sutton Parker, sister of the dead lieutenant, openly accused one of the officers of being guilty of the murder of her husband. The incident occurred over Carvel Hall headquarters of the naval witnesses. Photographers had asked Lieutenants Adams, Berryman and Bevan to pose for pictures.

"Go to the Suttons; they want the mystery and will give you all you want," replied Adams, turning to Mrs. Sutton and her daughter, a few feet away. Mrs. Parker, for the moment, lost control of her feelings.

"I can tell you the name of the man who murdered my brother," she declared with feeling. "He is not far from here now," she added.

While the score of guests at the hotel, attracted by the high pitched voices of the naval men and women, looked on in amazement, the pretty little woman continued to denounce her brother-in-law and his former associates in no mild terms. The incident was closed only after the lieutenants withdrew from the hotel.

The board of inquiry decided to change the scene of the inquiry to the Auditorium Annex, a more commodious place than the administration building, originally chosen.

The board of inquiry is composed of Commander John Wood, U. S. N.; Major W. C. Neville, U. S. M. C.; Lieutenant H. M. Bemis, U. S. N., and Major Harry Leonard, U. S. M. C., judge advocate general.

Major Leonard announced to-day that the hearing was three-cornered. It will be to get new facts in the death of Sutton and not to fix the guilt upon any individual for the shooting. The object of the Government, declared Major Leonard, was to throw additional light upon the affair, the principals among the marine officers want their names cleared of any suspicion, while the Sutton family appears in the role of complainants to remove the stigma of suicide from the name of the dead man.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight, London Time

Harriman Now Eats Eight Meals a Day.

VIENNA.—A special cable correspondent reports that E. H. Harriman is declared to be suffering from rheumatism of the muscles, stiffness of the spine and from neurasthenia. Told by Prof. Strueupell that he was suffering from starvation, Mr. Harriman replied: "I had time enough to make a fortune, but lacked time to eat three meals a day." He has now been placed on a diet which necessitates eating lightly eight times a day, from 7 in the morning to 9:30 at night.

A modern American heating system will be installed, and it will be decorated and furnished to suit her own admittedly good taste.

TARBOX EXILE UNDER A NEW CANADIAN LAW

Police Chief Charles E. Boston of Woodsocket, R. I., where Bernard L. Tarbox and his nineteen-year-old stenographer, Gertrude Mae Bevlne, went through a form of marriage prior to eloping to Canada, said today that if Tarbox and the girl could be found in Canada he would move to get them into custody under the new Canadian interpretation of the "undesirable alien" law.

This new interpretation has just been worked successfully in the case of Joseph Smythe of Plymouth and Miss Alice M. Aldrich of Kingston, who says, by the way, that Smythe is a niece of United States Senator Nelson M. Aldrich of Rhode Island. Smythe and Miss Aldrich went to Canada after complaint had been made by Mrs. Smythe.

Deported Under New Law.

They were traced there and were deported to this side of the line by the Canadian immigration officials, who have new and unusual powers in this respect on account of the influx of thousands of new land seekers to Canada.

Plymouth County sheriffs, working in cooperation with the Canadian immigration officials, nabbed the elopers the minute the train crossed the boundary. Now the two are back in Plymouth for trial.

This course is just what Police Chief Boston of Woonsocket and Attorney Francis M. Carroll, counsel for the Devine girl's people, would like to pursue in the Tarbox case, especially in regard to Tarbox.

If they can get definite trace of Tarbox, who is said to be in Montreal, they will undoubtedly try the same ingenious plan.

Chief Boston says:

"We want to get Tarbox. We have a warrant for him as a bigamist. We have sent posts and descriptions and pictures of him broadcast.

Get Tarbox is One Idea.

"We don't care whether he is put into our custody from Canada as a bigamist or as an undesirable alien. The thing we wish to do is to get him. It was a good scheme which was worked in the Plymouth case and maybe we can do the same regarding Tarbox."

"No, I have not asked Chief Boston of Woonsocket to proceed against Tarbox under the new interpretation of the Canadian immigration laws," said Attorney Carroll, "for the very good reason that I do not know just where Tarbox is now. I do not know that he is in Canada. I would like to find it out, however, where he and Miss Devine are. If I find they are in Canada I will ask the Woonsocket authorities to take action.

CAPE AGAIN MENACED BY FOREST FIRE

BOURNE, Cape Cod, July 19.—The most terrible forest fires Cape Cod has known for years are now raging.

Nearly a thousand men, boys and even women and girls are trying to hold the flames in check.

The long growth has made woodlands like tinder. Two great walls of fire are now sweeping over hundreds of acres of forest growth. One fire is between Herring pond and the head of Buzzards Bay. The other is raging along the Falmouth road, from Bourne to Monument Beach. Both started almost simultaneously, and the smaller one is believed to have been caused by a blaze started by gypsy moth fighters, but which got beyond their control.

Covers Ten Miles.

The fire between Herring pond and Buzzard's Bay has burned over a stretch ten miles long and two miles wide. The other fire has left behind a blackened area four miles long and one and one-half miles wide.

The flames are sweeping from tree to tree with lightning rapidity. The fire fighters are making a stand every road. The strong west wind is fanning the flames into greater fury.

The fires had been raging about twenty-four hours when rain began to fall last evening. It was thought the downpour had quenched the conflagration. But to-day the fires sprang up again with the wind.

In Bourne there is fear that cranberry bogs, valued at $75,000, will be destroyed. They are owned by Elton Weeks, David Baker, Oscar Baker, Walter Nye, James Haskell, Mrs. Rhoda Swift, Charles Haskell and William Ware, and cover seventy-five acres all told.

One regiment of fire-fighters 500 strong is stretched along the Bay Valley and Bournedale roads. Others from Sandwich, South, Sagamore, Bourndale, Bourne and Buzzards' Bay.

Women Aid in Fight.

The steadily advancing wall of fire is threatening the home of Charles Bird, near the shore of Sandy Pond, in Plymouth, near the Bourne line.

If the wind should shift in the east the houses of former Senator William A. Nye, William Beale and Nathan Smith would be in great danger.

Women and children are aiding men in keeping the roofs of houses near Herring Pond and in the village of Cedarville.

AVIATOR RESCUED FROM SEA

to get his machine in action the dangerous voyage apparently had no terrors. It was at 6:40 o'clock when, with a great whirring of the propeller he rose in the air. It was nearly four hours later when Latham was again brought to solid ground upon the Harpon, and in the meanwhile the crowds which had gathered were added to by great numbers.

The French destroyer Harpon had been loaned by the French government for the experiments. Extra coal to speed the Harpon could not keep pace with the swirling flying aeroplane, but was enabled to keep well enough to render aid.

When it was seen to-day that perfect weather and favorable mechanical conditions would allow the flight the Harpon cast off while Latham was soaring in circles and under full steam started in a straight line towards Dover. The crowds on the heights above Calais gave forth a mighty cheer as they saw the aeroplane start in the wake of the destroyer over-take it and pass it.

High Start is Made.

Upon the theory that safety lay in high flight the start was made from the point of a cliff 500 feet above the level of the channel. Latham's method in selecting a great altitude for his starting point is ridiculed by aeroplanists in general. They declare that to be practical the machine must be able to start from any point. Latham's contention has been that the height there is greatest.

"I cannot explain exactly what stopped the motor," said Latham after being landed from the Harpon. "I tried the engine again and again, but couldn't get it to perform its functions. I was obliged to glide down to the surface of the channel in a gradual manner.

"I was going well at the time, too, and maintaining an even height of 400 feet above sea level. Everything else was in favor. I shall make another attempt in about a week or ten days, when I hope to be successful."

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. R. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCraun, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. W. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

School Children Charges Alarm City

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Parents Will Demand an Investigation

Amazing Accusations of Immorality by Mrs. Katherine Ware Smith Will Receive Immediate Attention by Authorities.

Ready to Submit Specific Evidence of Depravity, She Says, at Any Time Called Upon to Go Before the Board.

Mrs. Katherine Ware Smith.

The startling evidence offered by Mrs. Katherine Ware Smith of the danger which surrounds the morals of the young school children of Boston, which was explained in the SUNDAY AMERICAN, has aroused such intense interest in homes all over the city that the School Committee will be asked to call a meeting and have Mrs. Smith give specific details, if she is not invited to do so.

George E. Brock, of the school committee, was profoundly interested in Mrs. Smith's statements. He said today:

"That such a condition of immorality as is indicated in Mrs. Smith's statement exists I was totally unaware. Of course I understood that in so large a city as Boston there are individual cases of young girls who go astray. But that such a condition as she says exists I cannot believe.

"If this is so then there is a very serious problem and it will have to be met. The school committee will be only too glad to hear Mrs. Smith and take action in the premises.

Demand for Evidence.

"Just what the school committee can do I cannot say. That a defective system of education in our schools is responsible for the immorality Mrs. Smith charges I am not willing to admit. One swallow does not make a summer. We will be glad to hear Mrs. Smith. Let's have the evidence."

James P. Magenis, a member, said: "The school committee has not jurisdiction over the children outside of school hours. It has them under its control, only five out of the twenty-four hours each day, and further it is not a police body that can follow the children to and from school each session.

"Let Mrs. Smith give the school committee the facts in this case; we shall be glad to hear them. The Boston school committee is no receptive a body of men, as I have ever met. They are anxious and willing to hear any complaints of conditions that exist within their province.

"If things are as bad as Mrs. Smith declares, it seems to be incumbent upon her to come forward with the proofs."

Mrs. Smith's statements are so strong that the public will not allow them to be ignored. Some official action must be taken or admitted that they exist. In support of her contentions there is the case of Albert Porter, a deputy fire chief, who was supposed to have a spotless reputation, but whose personal reputation, but whose present jail sentence was the outcome of charges made against him by the mother of a girl whom he used to meet after school hours.

Another instance is the case of George Washington Sikes, and his wife, both of whom are serving long jail terms for enticing children to an attic room at a house in Jefferson street. Ten boys, of all nationalities testified against the pair and their evidence was so strong and the case so objectionable that no lawyer would defend them.

Several Cases Cited.

Mrs. Smith says that there now exists among school children a degree of immorality that is appalling. She cites several cases, naming the localities, where men and women are spending their time luring children to evil.

"I have personal knowledge of it in a section around the Pleasant street and Harrison avenue neighborhoods," she says, "where nearly fifty girls, none of them more than fourteen years, have been initiated into these horrible practices.

"But the startling feature of all this" says Mrs. Smith, "is that there is reason to suspect that a similar condition exists among the children of the more favored neighborhoods, even in the suburbs."

Standing back of her in this matter are such men as Joseph Lee, father of the playground movement, and Mrs. Lee, a social worker and a worker among children; C. C. Carstens, agent for the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children; Miss Ellen Coolidge, Professor Emery, Miss Richards and others. Mr. Carstens, who has himself carefully weighed the evidence, says that Mrs. Smith has understated the matter, if anything.

Mrs. Smith said that late last Winter or in early Spring she got her first hint. She intercepted an improper note which one of the girls under her care had in her possession. It was from George Washington Sikes, a sort of vagabond poet and boot agent, who, with his wife, Lucinda, made a practice of demoralizing little girls in their miserable attic room in a cheap Jefferson street lodging house. Sikes had volumes of his own poems, which he sold for more or less for from 10c. to 50c. Back Bay families. When he was not doing that he wrote begging letters.

Sent Letters by Thousand.

More than fifty of these letters were sent to the charity officials, and there is little doubt that he circulated thousands. He was convicted in March, and is now serving a sentence at hard labor of not less than twelve nor more than fifteen years of debauching children. His wife, who was a partner in his horrible work, is serving a sentence of ten years.

The man's crimes were so apparent and he was so obviously guilty that no lawyer would defend him and he and his cowardly wife were convicted without having counsel.

Leading directly out of this case was that of Deputy Fire Chief Albert Porter, a man supposedly with a spotless reputation, to whom many deeds of what were credits to life, a father of several children, is now serving a sentence of not less than six nor more than eight years. One jury disagreed after a long trial, but the presiding judge was so convinced of Porter's guilt that he ordered an immediate second trial and he was found guilty. He was defended by the chief counsel obtainable. Seven little children testified against this man.

There are now pending in the Children's Society complaints of more than thirty children, twenty-five of them girls, and all the group of men, including one man of means. Unfortunately for the prosecuting officers, the automobile headquarters in which these innocents were corrupted by the wholesale was one of those destroyed by fire several months ago in the Park Square neighborhood, and all the employes who may have had knowledge of the crimes done there have been discharged.

"What do you think, Mrs. Smith, is the root of this evil? Is it due to the congested neighborhood?"

"The root of it is ignorance, the cure is education," she said. "It is true that the evil is aggravated by the city's slum conditions, the sale of the terrible stuff called whiskey from many of the dives. But I have no reason to suspect that this evil is not confined to these crowded, poor neighborhoods.

"More than that, I hope to arouse a very substantial minority among the parents, in fact they are coming to us in splendid response. Poverty doesn't always spell immorality. There are many neglectful fathers and mothers who for reasons over which they have no control live in these places, but who fear God and want their children to grow up good men and women. They are full with indignation at the disclosures. This is true, too, of many others of different nationalities and religions in this quarter."

"What is your remedy?" she was asked.

"I have a remedy, but I fear it will take a long time to get people interested. It is a change in the curriculum in every school to include instruction along sex hygiene for children. I would have a proper intendent of physiology, and hygiene, and instead of eliminating the most vital part of this instruction I would have it taught in every class room.

"Do you believe in separating the boys and girls?

"As a general proposition, decidedly not," she said. "But for this special evil one child in forty periods of adolescence I should do so.

"The crime," said Mrs. Smith, "lies in some unbuttoned buttons on the back of their pinafores by a woman who did not offer to stop and help. The girl blushingly whispered her troubles to Traffic Policeman Flaherty. He removed his gloves and fastened the buttons, with a giggling, gasping crowd for an audience.

COURT HOLDS NEGRO SAVED FROM A MOB

Russell Wallace, a negro, from the forgeted boat Wallace, was today held for the Superior Court. It is alleged that he entered the home of Michael Murray, in Charlestown, at midnight Saturday, and frightened fourteen-year-old Sarah Murray.

The screams of the terrorized girl frightened the negro from the house. He was pursued and finally nearly within a short distance of the Murray home. Patrolman O'Laughlin rescued the negro from an angry mob that threatened to lynch him. He was locked up and arraigned in the Charlestown Court today on the charges of drunkenness and assault.

The negro entered the Murray home through a window in the little girl's room, going to the bed and kissing her while she slept. She turned on the light and discovered Wallace. When she screamed Wallace told her to be quiet and showed a roll of $500. The girl's cries attracted her father.

The negro escaped through the window and before Mr. Murray entered the room. He at first thought the girl had been dreaming. Later his son came in and told of the pursuit and capture of the negro. Mr. Murray quickly notified the police and brought the charge against Wallace.

In court to-day Judge Corbett placed the charge of drunkenness on file. Wallace said that he was drunk and did not know what he had done. Police officers testified that a brick was found on a table in the room.

"This is a very serious charge," said Judge Corbett. "You broke into the home and entered a young lady's room. Drunkenness is no excuse. I will hold you in $500 for the Superior Court, that this case may be looked into."

ROOSEVELT IS HOMESICK SAYS LETTER

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Colonel Roosevelt, to judge from a letter received from him by a friend in this city, is having quite as successful and interesting a trip as he anticipated. This letter was dated Nairobi, in Africa, and among its striking passages was one referring to Kermit Roosevelt's hunting.

Kermit, it seems, shows more enthusiasm than caution in the pursuit of African big game. Some of his encounters have been of a nature to excite remark from his father, and it is inferred that they must have long ago left room for doubt as to his being considered out of the ordinary by an competent an authority as the ex-President.

Though enjoying his stay in Africa, Col. Roosevelt apparently has a touch of homesickness now and then. His correspondent was enjoined to write and "give the news."

A letter received from Nairobia, dated June 9, and written by a newspaper correspondent, says:

When Colonel Roosevelt, his son Kermit, Major Mearns, Professors Loring and Heller, and Messrs. Cunningham and Lewis H. Tarlton left Nairobi, June 3, by special train for Kijabe, the party was accompanied by two newspaper correspondents.

Reached High Altitude.

Kijabe, which is at an altitude of 6,720 feet, was reached at 5.10 p. m. On the platform all the porters of the expedition were lined up and received the ex-President as he stepped from the train. Behind them Rev. Charles Hurlburt and members of the American Mission at Kijabe were waiting to receive him. Rev. Mr. Hurlburt introduced various missionaries and asked Colonel Roosevelt to dine at the mission that night, but he said he preferred to go right on to the Sunday Court, that this case may be looked into."

CAUSE OF BINGHAM'S DOWNFALL WEDS

NEW YORK, July 19.—George H. Duffy, who was used as the lever with which to throw Police Commissioner Bingham out of office is on his honeymoon with his bride, who was Miss Margaret C. Carey, daughter of a patrolman in the One Hundred and Fifteenth Precinct. She was the belle of the Bay Ridge Telephone Exchange.

BERNARD O'CONNOR, SOUTH BOSTON BOY, BITTEN BY DOG

Little two-year-old Bernard O'Connor, son of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Connor of No. 287 Athens street, South Boston, is to day suffering from frightful lacerations in the cheek, neck and left cheek as the result of being attacked and bitten by a treacherous mongrel dog. At the first ominous signs the child is to be rushed to the City Hospital, where he will undergo the Pasteur treatment.

Katie, Bernard's thirteen-year-old sister, had occasion to go to a nearby store for some purchases. "Mamma, tan I do, too?" lisped the little boy. "We want to go wif Tatie."

"Yes," said the mother. "Take him along with you, Katie, but be careful of little brother."

Hand in hand the children went to Mrs. Trainor's notion store at No. 343 E street, where Katie left the child on the steps while she went inside to make her purchases.

With a savage growl Mrs. Trainor's dog, which not long ago is said to have bitten another child, leaped by Katie and on to the steps where it jumped upon the helpless little boy baby, tearing his cheek, neck and chin.

Katie heard a shrill wail and darted out after the dog. Beating the cur off with a kicking it she snatched up the shrieking child and ran home with him. Dr. John Jones of West Broadway was summoned and he countered the terrible bites and tears and was forced to put six stitches in the baby's cheek and two more in the cheek.

The cur was captured by the police on Station 6 and sent to the Animal Rescue League, where it will be closely observed to determine if it was afflicted with rabies.

NEEDED FRESH EGGS, TOOK HENS TO HOTEL

NEW YORK, July 19.—Told it was impossible to get fresh eggs in New York, Mrs. Elma Walker and sister, Miss Pullen, brought a rooster and four hens in a wicker basket when they came visiting from Greensburg. They rented a room at the Hoffman House, but the rooster pecked the hand of the porter as he carried the basket, and they had to send the poultry home.

ALDERMEN MEET MONDAY.

A special meeting of the Aldermen will be called for next Monday to consider appropriations for the new Finance Commission and for the City Record, the official for the reporting and publishing of the Boss hate in day for New York and to morrow will said for Europe. He goes for the purpose of bringing back his two daughters, Rose and Agnes, who have been studying in Belgium for a year. As the trip is to be a short one Mrs. Fitzgerald will remain at home. Mr. Fitzgerald will be on the continent about two weeks, making flying trips to some of the leading cities in Germany to study some needed improvement. The trip has no political significance, says Mr. Fitzgerald.

"Politics—oh, no!" said the ex-mayor at his home in Dorchester today. "I am leaving the field for a few weeks to be sure, but of the other magnificent opportunities that may exist in the Fitzgerald name they are welcome to take advantage of it. I have no fear.

"A complete knowledge of the most up-to-date methods in business, such as Boston needs just now, is a good thing for a mayor to have. That is what I intend to have.

"I am leaving Boston for 1910. The 1915 movement and the Chamber of Commerce work are both praiseworthy and are getting at the thing right, and this city has got to hustle for business.

To Study Docks Abroad.

"Boston has been a city now of development for twenty-five years, and it is time right now for her to get out of her shell. The development of the port of Boston is also looking toward the still greater development of the city, and I intend to study what is done in the water traffic is what I am after.

"Boston should not only make goods that are in demand in the world markets, but also that are in demand in the world for a demand right here in New England and Boston. I am also interested in inland waterways. I think we shall soon see the Cape Cod Canal opened and the canal to come up from Fall River, through Taunton and Hawkins and into Provincetown harbor. Also the canal to develop the section in the Merrimac River Valley around Lowell and Lawrence is likely to come along.

"I am going to suspend two weeks in Hamburg and Bremen, to find some points in the management of the big dock interests there, the manufacturing industries and especially the matter of technical and industrial education.

"Keep Money in Boston.

"Boston manufacturers in the next few years would ordinarily send out about $25,000,000 for investment and promotion of industries in the West. Keep this at home, and under the new charter the city's manufacturing would be so increased as to give employment to 50,000 more people than at present and also add probably two or three millions to the taxable valuation."

"I am not going abroad for political reasons or to escape politicians. You must remember that the campaign for 1910 this year will begin late. The decision concerning Plans 2 and 3 will not be made until the November election, and the municipal campaign will take place until January."

"I am interested in Plan 2, and believe, also, that it will win. If I go into the mayor's chair next January I shall be free from office and my absence from the city at this time will not interfere with the progress of the efficient degree. Whether or not I am elected mayor I believe that I will aid the city by getting whatever information I can during the limited time at my disposal concerning commerce and industry in Europe."

"I wish it were possible for every citizen to have the broadening, educating benefit of a trip to Europe and an inspection of its industries, its civic progress and its thoroughness of methods. I believe that the time will come when my daughters have devoted to study abroad will be of inestimable benefit, by bringing them in touch with girls of other languages and nations and giving them an opportunity to see the world from a new and intimate viewpoint."

FITZGERALD ON TRIP TO HELP 'BOSTON 1910'

Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald will leave Boston late to-day for New York and to-morrow will said for Europe. HYPNOTIC LOVE DEATH DEFENCE

WATSEKA, Ill., July 19.—With $5,000 on hand and the wealth of Pennsylvania relatives amounting to a quarter of a million unreservedly placed at her disposal, Mrs. Lora Sayler, wife of Dr. William Miller, who killed John Byron Sayler, the banker, to-day began her fight to clear her husband of the charge of murder.

She is in Watseka to-day assisting Attorney Fred P. Morris in the preparation of evidence which she hopes will clear the prominent physician, who is locked up in the Iroquois County jail with Mrs. Lucy Sayler, the slain man's widow, and her father and brother, John and Ira Grunden.

For the first time to-day Mrs. Miller told fully the story of her marital unhappiness and the wrecking of her home by Mrs. Sayler. She advances a new theory for the slaying of the banker, in which Egyptian plays an important part. She said her husband never really loved this woman, but was the victim of her hypnotic spell.

According to her theory, Dr. Miller was held against his will at the Sayler home on the fatal night and that Mrs. Sayler goaded her husband on to attack the physician, who was compelled to resort to self-defence. She says she has a witness who will swear that Dr. Miller once said to him:

"I wish I could get that Mrs. Sayler off my hands."

Like the Sayler brothers, who have organized a "clan" to prosecute the prisoner, Dr. Miller's Pennsylvania relatives have banded together and pooled their wealth to rescue the physician.

JAILED FOR THEFT; ACCUSED AS FORGER

John Stanley Thirty-five, giving his home as No. 95 East, Brookline, was to-day arraigned in the Roxbury Court on a charge of larceny and another of forgery. On the former he was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction. He waived examination on the forgery complaint and was held in $1,000 for the Grand Jury. It is alleged that he snatched the pocketbook of Mrs. Mary McGowan of No. 31 Vine street in the Roxbury postoffice on Wednesday when, captured, two forged checks were found on him, according to the police.

SIX AUTOISTS FINED.

Six autoists paid fines of $15 each in the Dedham Court to-day for overspeeding, the result of a trap which the police had out on Sunday. They were Arthur D. Macey, John F. Doherty and Chaswell E. Chellman of Boston, Charles B. Capelle and Frank S. Turner of Worcester and Eaton Cottrill of Pawtucket.

HELL A MYTH SAYS PASTOR

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—"There is no hell. The idea of eternal torment that has frightened and oppressed us for ages is a myth and a relic of barbarism and evolution of an imaginative mind. Although supposed to be based on the teachings of the Holy Bible, there is nothing in the Scriptures that even hints at such a thing."

This was the keynote of an address by Rev. Charles T. Russell, pastor of the Brooklyn Tabernacle of New York, before an audience of 2,000 in the First Presbyterian church of Oakland.

Continuing, he said:

"Hell was a death, and it is death that his children have inherited. For 6,000 years our race has been sinking lower and lower in physical and spiritual standing. Adam, before he sinned, was perfect. After he had suffered the curse he lived 900 years. To-day we live thirty-five years, and only one out of every 150 of us is counted in on asylum for the living. That after the death of 200,000 of human beings."

OLD LIBBY PRISON OWNER PASSES AWAY

TOLEDO, July 19.—While making repairs on his cottage at Lake Harbor, William Pelz, the owner of the famous Libby Prison when the Civil War broke out, and supposed to be the discoverer of the story that indicted Jefferson Davis for treason after the war, died from an accident of the day before yesterday.

At the outbreak of the war Pelz was a prosperous merchant in Richmond. When he refused to build gunboats for the Confederacy he was thrown into prison, but in a transfer of prisoners he escaped to Washington and joined General's forces at Yorktown as headquarters scout.

INQUEST TO SOLVE DEATH MYSTERY

WARE, July 19.—An inquest will be held on the mysterious death of Louis Macey, thirty-five, who was found unconscious early to-day on the West Brookfield road. He died on the way to Dr. Burke's office, where the crew of a trolley car was taking him. He had a deep gash in his forehead. According to the police, Macey attended a dance at the Old Rock House yesterday. The police say there was no sign of blood where Macey was found.

The Folly of Using Raw Milk

Many careful homes have quit using raw milk. They are now serving milk without germs in it. They are cooking with milk twice as rich as before. They are saving half on their milk bills. Will you let us tell you why?

The demand for Van Camp's Milk now is so great that we milk 20,000 cows.

Yet we could not supply one hundredth part the demand if all people knew about it.

Do you suppose that people will buy germ-laden milk when they once find a milk that is pure?

Do you suppose they will ever again cook with half-milk when they learn how whole milk tastes?

Do you suppose they will buy milk from day to day when they know what it means to have a cow in the kitchen?

You won't—nor will any one—after once proving these facts.

A Germless Milk

Van Camp's is a germless milk.

Every cow is inspected—so are the men who milk them. No tubercular cows, no diseased milkmen, convey their infections to Van Camp's Milk.

Our dairies are sanitary. Our creameries, where the milk is evaporated, are built without wood. We make a business of cleanliness.

Then the milk is sterilized after the cans are sealed. Not a germ of any kind can remain in it.

This milk is safe, and your milkman's milk isn't. There are myriads of germs in every drop of raw milk.

It is wrong to take such risks.

A Whole, Rich Milk

Van Camp's is simply rich Holstein milk, with two-thirds the water evaporated. Nothing whatever is added. Nothing is subtracted, save water.

Here you get the whole milk.

Your milkman's milk separates. You either get too little solids or too little butter fat.

It separates again when you get it. So the milk used for cooking is rarely more than a half milk.

Compare one milk dish made with Van Camp's with one made with milkman's milk. Note the difference in richness and flavor.

That will be enough to forever convert you to the use of this whole, rich milk.

A Cow in the Kitchen

Then think how convenient.

Rich milk or cream whenever you want it. No waiting for the milkman, no shortage, no sickness.

Yet Van Camp's is the cheaper.

It is as thick as thick cream; so thick that you add one part water for coffee. Yet it doesn't cost half your milkman's price for cream.

Add two parts water and you have rich milk. The cost of such milk, when you buy Van Camp's by the case, is about six cents per quart.

Then you have no waste—no milk left over. Sometimes Van Camp's cuts off half on the milk bills.

Think of paying the milkman twice what you pay for such milk as this.

Safe for Children

When you serve Van Camp's to your children you don't serve sickness with it. When you serve raw milk, you don't know.

Van Camp's has a slight almond flavor, due to sterilization. It doesn't taste just like raw milk.

Explain to the child that this flavor—delicious but different—means that the milk is pure.

Raw milk is just as unfit as raw meat. Pasteurized milk is the only safe milk. Before long, our laws will require it.

No Other Such Milk

Don't think of Van Camp's as condensed milk. Condensed milk is half sugar. You can't use it in cooking.

And don't think that other evaporated milks are as good as Van Camp's.

Analysis of Van Camp's shows about 8 per cent of butter fat. That means we use Holstein milk and take out two-thirds of the water.

A milk with half of that water left in may be called "evaporated." But it won't be as rich as Van Camp's.

We are preparing for you the finest milk in the world. Please be sure that you get it.

Van Camp's Milk comes in 5 and 10-cent cans, at your grocer's. It is put up at our dairies, in five states, by the Van Camp Packing Co., Indianapolis, Ind.

MEMORY LOST AFTER VISIT TO DENTIST

Unable to tell her name or address or give any clew to the manner in which she lost her memory, a mysterious woman, with all appearances of refinement, lies in a semi-conscious condition in the Boston Lying-in Hospital to-day, where her case is baffling scientists who have examined her. It is believed the woman may be suffering from lapse of memory as a result of the administration of an anesthetic Sunday by a dentist.

She appeared yesterday at the home of Professor James Lee Love, No. 18 Francis avenue, Cambridge, and was found sitting in a chair on the veranda. She told Professor Love that she had come from a dentist's office where she had some teeth extracted. Soon after she became unconscious. She was unable to answer questions regarding her name or address. She replied to each, "I don't know."

Dr. G. G. Averill of Cambridge street, who was called, failed to get any other answer from the woman. He found that she had recently had several teeth extracted. He advised her removal to the Cambridge Hospital, and there after physicians had questioned her for several hours she managed to scribble on a piece of paper the name "Maude Smith, Boston." There is no such name in the Boston directory and the police have thus far been unable to trace any woman of such a name.

The stranger is about forty years old, medium height and of dark complexion. When she called at Professor Love's she wore a blue shirt, black coat, light shirtwaist and striped skirt. She carried a fashionable bag, which contained a small amount of money and a few personal belongings. These gave no clew to her identity.

SPENCER H. OVER GIVEN LOVING CUP

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 19.—Spencer H. Over, who has resigned the general management of the Narragansett Brewing Company, was tendered a complimentary banquet by his office employes and collectors for the corporation, as well as by General Manager Lincoln Steere. Mr. Over was given a loving cup as a token of the esteem of fifty of the men who had worked under his direction, and, in addition, by his acknowledgment of the gift, the secretary of those present and thanked Mr. Schlerholz, who is now his successor, for the loyal support the latter had always rendered.

1,500 SEE LION AND TIGER FIGHT

NEW YORK, July 19.—While 1,500 persons looked on in amazement, a lion and tiger of the Bostock Animal Show at Coney Island started fighting and before they could be separated the hindquarters of the lion had been so mangled by his striped companion that he died to-day. It will probably have to be shot. The shooting of revolvers by trainers and attendants terrified spectators, and there was very near being a panic.

SIXTEEN PERISH IN FREAK STORM

NEW YORK, July 19.—A strange and sudden storm that swept the Bronx and New York Bay, leaving the rest of the city unscathed, killed sixteen persons by drowning, injured seventy-five in the wreck of a launch and placed a host of others in peril of their lives.

YOUTHFUL CRIMINAL SHOOTS LITTLE GIRL

BURLINGTON, N. J., July 19.—Before the eyes of her mother, Hilda Frances Lord, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lord, was shot by ten-year-old Joseph Kane, who, despite his youthful years, the authorities declare, has already achieved an extended record for juvenile crime.

"Josie's parents were away and we found the old gun in the kitchen," said Thomas Scaia, an eleven-year-old companion. "Just then we say Frances coming up the path and Josie says, 'Watch me kill her.' Then he ran out of the door, pointed the gun at her and said, 'I am going to shoot you.' Frances cried and said, 'Me only little girl; you mustn't shoot me,' and started to run away. Then Josie shot her and we all ran away."

ONE MAN PERISHES IN NORTH END FIRE TRAP; MANY LEAP TO SAFETY

In lower left-hand corner is Aib on Cardaz; above are Francis Cardaz, his mother and her three-months'-old child, Valerie. Lower picture is of Mary Koughia, who jumped from window.

One man was killed, four people were injured, a dozen were overcome by smoke, while scores jumped from upper story windows into life nets and the arms of rescuers during a fire which imperilled the lives of over fifty people early to-day in the three-story brick tenement block at Nos. 17, 19 and 21 Morton street, North End.

Policemen, firemen and citizens vied with one another in daring rescues.

A fireman suspended in midair, at the risk of his own life, rescued a man just as he was about to fall to the street below.

Two men made an improvised net of their arms and caught several people as they jumped from the burning building, at the risk of life and limb, while policemen carried women and children in their arms through the blinding flame and smoke.

THE DEAD.

JOHN BOULKIE, 35 years old, of No. 19 Morton street; found suffocated on third floor of his tenement.

THE INJURED.

BENJAMIN ROTTENBERG, 25 years old, of No. 19 Morton street, jumped through window, badly cut and bruised. Relief Hospital.

MORRIS GOLDSTEIN, 30 years old, of No. 19 Morton street, jumped through window, severely cut by glass. Relief Hospital.

MARY KOUSHA, 22 years old, of No. 19 Morton street, injured her leg by jumping from window. Relief Hospital.

PATROLMAN MICHAEL WILSON of the Hanover street station, left arm injured while holding life net. Relief Hospital.

The fire started in the basement of No. 19 Morton street and rapidly spread up the stairway.

Those who were awakened only to find their escape cut off by the flames and dense clouds of smoke that came rolling up through the halls.

Women in Mad Panic.

Women screamed and grasped their babies, while the men, crazed with fear, stood helpless while the flames swept through the block.

Passersby had discovered the blaze and a hurry call was sent in to the Hanover Street Police Station, while Zax Freedman of No. 75 Endicott street ran to No. 17, on the corner of Hanover and Endicott streets and sounded an alarm.

Sergeant McDevitt and a squad of officers, including Patrolman Murphy, Dineen, Wilson and Sweeney answered the call and rushed into the burning building through the smoke and flames to rescue the women and children, most of whom were rapidly being overcome by smoke.

The police and fire officials are sorely puzzled over the cause of the fire, as there are several mysterious circumstances surrounding its origin. State Fire Marshal Smith is conducting a rigid examination to-day, as there is a strong suspicion of incendiarism and arrests are likely to follow.

Human Life Net.

Charles Sweeney and D. S. Driscoll of No. 3 Main street, Charlestown, happened to be passing the house when the fire broke out and standing on the sidewalk the two men locked their arms together, making an improvised life net, and caught three men who jumped from a second story.

Aside from being shaken up, none of the trio were hurt, as they landed fairly in the big arms of the volunteer heroes.

The damage is estimated at over $6,000. The buildings are owned by Annie and Lizzie Goldman of Roxbury.

The police and fire officials are sorely puzzled over the cause of the fire, as there are several mysterious circumstances surrounding its origin. State Fire Marshal Smith is conducting a rigid examination to-day, as there is a strong suspicion of incendiarism and arrests are likely to follow.

BERNSDORFF NOW NEIGHBOR OF THE TAFTS

BEVERLY, July 19.—Two well known figures in diplomatic circles are now figured among the residents of the North Shore colony and are popular with President Taft and Mrs. Taft—Count von Bernsdorff, the German Ambassador, and the Countess von Bernsdorff. The Von Bernsdorffs have recently been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, and they are well known to society people of Massachusetts.

There are especial ties which make them popular with the Tafts. One of them is a two-volume edition de luxe, given by the Countess to Mrs. Taft. It is the memoirs of the late Count von Bernsdorff, father of the present Count, who was a personal friend of Alphonso Taft, the President's father, when the latter was the American minister to Germany.

Mrs. Taft has immensely pleased with the books, as is the President.

It was up to the secret service men assigned to the patrol of the Summer White House grounds to go to the rescue of a fair damsel in distress. They went, but they fell down on the job.

The heroine of the secret service men's flunk is Miss Eleanor Rockler of Newport, R. I. She came over here to call on Miss Helen Taft from Marblehead, where she has been staying. And on the way over she lost the key to her trunk.

The secret service men broken to Miss Helen, who called in the secret service men.

"Find the key; it's between here and Marblehead," or some thing like that, is all what she said. And the secret service men went.

They went by automobiles, cross-questioned by reporters, and bothered by pedestrians, but they couldn't find the key. Then, feeling wearied and dusty, discourage and indignant, the quixotic quartet returned, questioned at length, they returned to the Summer White House. The key was still missing, the trunk, presumably, is still locked.

SIGHT-SEEING YACHT RAMS A FERRYBOAT

NEW YORK, July 19.—A crash between a sight-seeing yacht and the Erie ferryboat Suffern to-day in the North River in the rush hour threw more than 200 passengers into the water. The collision, however, in which the Suffern ran down the yacht Pennsylvania, railroad ferryboat management is averted. Behind the Suffern was a for her slip. When it was seen by the captain of the Suffern that a crash was imminent he had the engines reversed. The Pennsylvania's boat was going ahead at a good speed, and only by a sharp turn was a second smash averted.

1 KILLED, 5 HURT IN UPSET OF AUTO

NEW YORK, July 19.—Going at the rate of sixty miles an hour down a steep hill, near Glenwood Pond, about twenty miles from Paterson, N. J., an auto containing W. M. F. Harding, a paper box manufacturer, his wife and four children, turned turtle. Mrs. Harding was crushed to death; Fred, a five-year-old son, is suffering from a broken arm and internal injuries. Mabel, eleven years old, had both arms and a shoulder broken; while Alfred, seven, and Esther, six, were badly bruised.

PASTOR PREVENTS WOMAN'S SUICIDE

WORCESTER, July 19.—Emily Maynard, fifty years old, a housekeeper for E. Thurston of No. 1050 Main street, attempted to end her life by drowning in Beaver Brook, but was prevented from doing so by the timely use of the water and the prompt arrival of Rev. Dr. Wilbur Chapman of the Pilgrim Memorial Church. Rev. Mr. Dockham found the woman lying in the brook with her face partly submerged.

BUDGET DRAGS IN COMMONS

By W. T. STEAD.

LONDON, July 19.—The budget has been slowly dragging through all-night sittings, but the House of Commons has not passed the half dozen clauses dealing with new taxes on the unearned increment of land.

Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told plain truth when he said that at this rate it would take three years to pass the budget. If the government means to pass the bill, a wholesale and drastic use of the closure is inevitable, and all other legislation must be dropped except the bill legislating the new constitution for the United South Africa.

Efforts are expressed in some quarters that South Africa did not adopt the federal principles, which would have given the Irish at the agreeable tone of the colonial deputation who insist that the Imperial Parliament must accept the new constitution without alteration or demur.

SMITH REPORTS ON TRAFFIC BY WATER

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 19.—Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, to-day submitted to the President Part 2 of a report of transportation by water, being the results which deals with railroad and water points out the predominance of both traffic in the transportation of oil by the two sources therefor. It outlines the practical reasons for this, one of which is economy, and makes an inter-sting comparison by dividing the oil traffic between the two systems of carriage into three great classes (1) rail, (2) deep water, coastwise and the Great Lakes, (3) rivers and canals. There has been an enormous increase in rail traffic. There has also been a great increase in coastwise and lake traffic. On the other hand there has been a marked decrease in the river and canal traffic. The enormous development of the Great Lakes business is largely due to the vast ore and grain trade moving eastward and the coal trade moving westward. About 40,000,000 tons of coal were moved eastward in 1908.

"LOBBY ACT" SECRETS OUT

One of the most peculiar returns under the "lobby act" sent out from the office of the Secretary of State this year shows that Catherine Coughlin paid David J. Mulloney $300 for obtaining $1,000 for her on account of the death of her husband in the big Chelsea fire.

Other returns to-day under the "lobby act" are:

The National Association of Audubon Societies paid E. H. Forbes $150 for expenses in connection with legislation affecting the association.

Christopher Mitty paid George Hodges Thinkum $250 for his services on the bill to permit the sale of soda, ice cream and confectionery on the Lord's Day.

The town of Scituate paid Harry H. Pratt a fee of $400 for his legal services on the bill to change the boundary line between Scituate and Cohasset.

The New England Telephone & Telegraph Company paid Powers & Hall $2,810 as legislative counsel. C. E. Davis received a fee of $1,200 and expenses of $585 as legislative agent, and the company states that it paid to Frank E. Hemenway, also a legislative agent, nothing but his salary earned.

The Columbian National Life Insurance Company paid Hallowell & Hammond $850.

PAYS $10,000 TO SQUARE A "SNUB"

SEATTLE, Wash., July 19.—To enable his beautiful young wife to take social precedence over Mrs. Frederick Stone Strawe, the handsome young wife of a millionaire lumberman, who has ruled with unquestioned authority, Robert Guggenheim, son of Daniel Guggenheim of New York, spent $10,000 buying ballots in the popularity contest, which ended a few days ago in the Orthopedic Hospital. In all nearly $20,000 went into the coffers of the hospital.

Young Guggenheim and his bride have not been admitted to the most exclusive homes. Because Mrs. Strawe, tall, witty, handsome and rich, had successfully kept her out of the inner circles, Mrs. Guggenheim revealed to her husband. He responded valiantly, but lost by about 500 votes, or $50.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS: FINANCIAL NEWS

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, July 19.—With the return of J. P. Morgan early this week it is expected that much greater activity will be developed in the stock market, that the trading will be broadened, prices advanced and a general bull market ushered in the hope of inducing the speculative public to purchase securities. So far, however, the public has not shown much disposition to take hold. It seems to realize that, so far as the actual dividend payments are concerned, prices for the majority of the stocks are too high.

$ $ $

As a rule the public does not concern itself very much with what is behind the shares, whether they are any "melons," so-called, to be cut in the dim and distant future, but, like a flock of sheep, it is the intrinsic value of the securities. The only thing that attracts its attention is the dividend. Under these circumstances it is not surprising that it is holding back and does it believe that present prices are justified if the present prevailing rate can be maintained. It is looking for a reaction, perhaps to the bargain counter prices of panicky days, but to a fairly live or ten points below the average to-day.

$ $ $

Notwithstanding Steel's monopoly of the stock market last week, the Bourse is not without its features. The session on Saturday, when for two hours Union Pacific superseded Steel common as a par-ticipant, indicates cogently that several properties are highly potential of making a decidedly unfavorable demonstration against operators who act on the theory that the bull era as a whole is too high.

$ $ $

Nothing particularly propitious is in store for the Union Pacific. J. Ogden Armour, one influential member of the Illinois Central, has deeded the revamped story of Union Pacific's control of the Illinois Central. That the Southern Pacific people are not disposed to enter into the compact to the extent of about 95 per cent. was common knowledge. That the Southern Pacific directors are likely to put the stock on a 7 per cent. basis in the near future and thus strengthen Union Pacific's treasury has been familiar for some time.

Yet, simultaneously it would seem, a number of heavy shorts rushed into the market and bought enough stock to lift the price almost four points within an hour. That which caused the Union Pacific is likely in other leading issues, including Reading, Pennsylvania and Readings.

To be short of the two first named is to be in commitments quite as precarious as those Union Pacific speculators found themselves. The purchases of Atchison by Pennsylvania interests have been large, though negotiations. Buying by individuals in Boston has been heavy. Directors have been the leading buyers, and it is to be noted that some of them are in the exchange situation that officers and their associates in the Southern Pacific corporation assume unbounded confidence in their respective companies.

$ $ $

On the other hand, plenty of money is to be had on good collateral, and the stock market boom is fed on easy money. Banks are gorged and will be glad to lend their funds. Which would be a contributory to a dangerous height. While quotations are not yet at a point to be dangerously so, the banks therefore will continue to lend. The rates for money may be advanced slightly in the fall, owing to the crop movement, but there is something to the same measure that it has helped U. S. Steel. The gain of $1,000,000 in earnings assigned the wage scale, disposing of the labor question for the time being, appeared to be regarded by the bulls as a matter of considerable favorable import.

$ $ $

The reports from Washington to the effect that President Taft intended to force upon Congress his views in favor of a downward revision of the tariff are exerting without market influence, the Street being apparently satisfied that whatever the tariff may be, Congress, in the end, would be better to get it out of the way at once. Nothing whatever tangible may now exist in the minds of the country's business men as to the effect of the revision of the question of the duties to be exacted on imports.

$ $ $

A perceptible advance in prices of the more important products of the farm, as one of an increasing output presents a problem of a most serious character. While the rise in advance in securities be merely a speculative movement, and the result of the creation of enlarging demand, it still uncertain. But the advance in prices all over the world on demand side of the market for silver as a commodity may be to be due to the fact of a considerable increase in the world's supply.

NEW SOUTHERN PACIFIC MARK

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, July 19.—New high records for Southern Pacific, Atchison and the Rock Island shares were features of the early trading in Wall street to-day. The market opened with most issues showing slight gains. Shortly after the beginning of trading Southern Pacific sold at 125¾, the highest price in its history.

Owing to the continuous good weather throughout the corn belt, stocks of roads in those lines rumored that territory were strong. Atchison reached the new high record of 117¾, Rock Island common 35¾ and preferred 74.

The Hill stocks were also strong, Great Northern preferred advancing half a point and Northern Pacific 3s, Union Pacific was steady at 198¾. St. Paul became active for the first time in many weeks and advanced nearly two points. Wabash preferred was a fraction higher.

Profit taking continued in the steel issues on a light scale. The common declined three-eighths of a point and the preferred one-quarter of a point. Speculation in these shares was not as heavy as recently.

American shares were strong in London under leadership of Union Pacific. Gross was the strong item on the New York curb market during the early trading. On a moderate volume of transactions it crossed ten.

Magness, who was liberated Saturday after serving eight months for desertion from the United States navy, to-day is spinning over the Virginia roads in a magnificent new touring car which was a part of the equipment of the palatial new home which Mrs. Magness, a daughter of the late Senator Gorman, had prepared as a surprise for him upon his return to her.

BULLISH TONE IN LOCAL LIST

STATE STREET, July 19.—Market sentiment continued bullish over Sunday and this was reflected in early prices, although there were signs of profit taking in a few stocks which have had sharp advances of late. Superior Copper was bought for Lake account, although there were fair offerings of the stock.

Giroux was the market feature, advancing to 10¾ on the same buying as Friday and Saturday last. North Butte eased off fractionally to 52 and Amalgamated eased to 82. U. S. Steel settled slightly to 71¾. Brokers report a few more commission orders on hand and expect to see a broader market from now on in mining shares.

The Boston Stock Exchange has listed $804,700 Butte Power 5 per cent. first mortgage bonds, due 1951. The American Glue Company's fiscal year is May 31, and last year the company earned $112,936 over above dividend requirements, an increase of $92,027 over the previous year.

Curb trading was of fair proportions, while there was activity in spots. Helvetia was one and Rhode Island Coal another. The former stiffened to 6¼ and the latter was firm at 3¾@3¾. Raven sold assessment paid and for cash. It rose from 32 to 45 cents.

THAW BRANDS WIFE'S STORY AS ALL FALSE

NEW YORK, July 19.—Harry K. Thaw to-day branded as false the most recent statement attributed to his wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, concerning his conduct both before and after marriage. Mrs. Mary Thaw, his mother, declined to comment in any way on the attitude assumed by the younger Mrs. Thaw.

"I have not at any time discussed for publication matters that have pertained to my son's affairs.

"I do not consider that anything has occurred as yet that is of sufficient importance to make me break that rule."

Thaw seemed to view the situation from a different angle. After a conference with his mother and his sister, Mrs. Copley Thaw, during a part of which Dr. H. Ernest Schmidt was present, the following typewritten signed statement was delivered to an AMERICAN reporter:

Mr. Thaw to his nothing to say about the article in the AMERICAN, but there is an absolute falsehood in an alleged interview in another paper this morning, which he requests you to deny categorically.

The statement was signed "H. K. Thaw."

Dr. Schmidt delivered the note and volunteered the information that Thaw was indignant at the statement made by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, charging him with cruelty bearing a page in the Hotel Carlton, London, and then rubbing salt into the wounds of his victim.

"Thaw is in splendid condition, both physically and mentally, declared Dr. Schmidt, "if have examined him every day since he came here, and I have nothing but praise in his conduct or conversation to indicate that he is not of sound mind. His physical condition is remarkable, taking into consideration his long confinement."

Dr. Schmidt handed the reporter a second slip of paper from Thaw's cell, which was typewritten the following:

"As there is no doubt of the integrity of the numerous witnesses who have testified for Mr. Thaw, it would be extraordinary if all were mistaken as to his perfect sanity. From a scientific point of view, there is no higher authority than Dr. Adolf Meyer and he gave the clearest testimony concerning Mr. Thaw's normality."

THE AMERICAN READ ABROAD? JUST SEE THIS

More convincing proof of the influence and standing of the BOSTON AMERICAN as a newspaper of world-wide influence could not be given than the attention paid to two remarkable stories which were printed in the columns of this paper by the Western Daily Mercury of Liverpool, England.

That the BOSTON AMERICAN is read in every quarter of the world, and that its columns are closely scanned by its readers the review of the facts given in the two narratives in this paper on the same date proves.

The Western Daily Mercury devoted an entire column to an epitome of the Slocerville tragedy, where John Murphy went insane suddenly one Saturday afternoon in June and ran amuck through the North Provision & Packing Company plant in that city and killed five men.

The description of that tragedy and the terrible life of privation and long years of frenzied work, all to make a meager living, which caused the unhinging of Murphy's mind, together with the awful calamity to which his family was reduced, only to be rescued by public generosity when the BOSTON AMERICAN published the whole story, has attracted interest all over the earth.

The Mercury devotes part of its column to pointing out lessons taught in the home of protection in an attempt to prove that misery in free trade lands is not greater than exists in countries where manufacturers and producers are favored by artificial trade walls. The paper says in introducing its account of Murphy's terrible actions on that June day:

"It may be of some benefit if we briefly describe some results of a peep into the dark fringe lying behind America's much afforded quite casually by the BOSTON AMERICAN of June 20."

On another page of the BOSTON AMERICAN of the same date, when the editor was attracted by the account of the journey of John Howard, the philanthropist of Denver, and grandnephew of Commodore Perry, who, in the course of his tramp across this country succeeded in a few months in himself the conditions of the poor, spent a night in a Boston "doss-house."

The English paper says that conditions in the Boston cesspool compare with the accommodation of wanderers show that in England the work of poor-law officialdom is to be most favorably contrasted with that of this country.

TURNED FROM "COUNT" BY MOTHER'S APPEAL FLASHED TO LINER

"Count" Guido Costarelli de Gregorio.

New York dispatches. Mrs. Lancaster was approached. Only messages of love and sympathy were transmitted.

Just what transpired on the Baltic when Captain Ransom told the "Count" that Lancaster what the wireless said is a matter of conjecture, but it is gathered from the messages which flew backward to New York from the speeding Baltic that Captain Ransom explained gently but firmly to Mrs. Lancaster that she had made a grievous mistake in sailing under such circumstances. That Captain Ransom was far less diplomatic in his language to the "Count" is accepted as a fact.

Mrs. Lancaster, it is said, protested at first against any accusations of duplicity being made against the "Count." She sent several messages received from her mother and other relatives put matters in a new light. She insisted to Captain Ransom that she had no intention of running away with the "Count" and that she never knew she was booked as "Signora de Gregorio." She declared she never authorized the "Count" to make any such arrangement.

One circumstance which came out that assertion in the presence of other Boston people aboard the Baltic. Such acquaintance as passing as "Signora de Gregorio" would be responsible for Mrs. Lancaster unless she avoided every familiar Boston face in a way that would be impossible to a woman who had been accustomed to have her every act unquestioned.

It is argued, in her behalf, that, if she did sail on the Baltic with full intent to leave her husband, that she only planned to gain freedom till Mr. Lancaster should sue for divorce on the ground for desertion and thus pave the way for marriage to the "Count."

This was not de Gregorio's plan, evidently, judging by the way he arranged matters to compromise the woman he is supposed to adore.

That conviction of this false friendship on the part of the "Count" is being forced into Mrs. Lancaster's mind is intimated by the wireless messages received in New York.

The "Count" and Mrs. Lancaster have separate staterooms on the Baltic. Captain Ransom will see to it that Mrs. Lancaster is duly protected en voyage. The next active development at the Baltic-ard will come when the vessel arrives on the other side. Plans have been made to have Mrs. Lancaster met by friends on the other side. The more prosaic cable service is being used to arrange this.

Mr. Lancaster has cabled friends in England, who have replied that they will meet Mrs. Lancaster. She will be asked, it is said, to return immediately. Failing this, effort will be made to have her accompany these friends. In either event de Gregorio will not be allowed to continue with her. He is to be treated coldly in view of the reported plans of de Gregorio merely to get possession of Mrs. Lancaster's wealth. It is expected tact he can easily be disposed of.

Mrs. Caroline Constable is expected back in Boston this afternoon. This is taken up another argument that the "Count" has settled now that no harm will occur to Mrs. Lancaster on the Baltic. Drug store, tion plans, of course, are sadly awry.

Husband Goes in Pursuit.

Meanwhile the guests and employes at the Hemenway Chambers are stirred by remarks ascribed to them concerning the "Count" and the Lancasters. They deny having said these things.

Guests at the hotel, in addition to denying that they had gossiped about Mrs. Lancaster, declare she is a very fine type of woman and that Gay has always lived her life fully exempt.

Mr. Lancaster will sail from New York tomorrow on the new mail steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse for Plymouth, Cherbourg and Hamburg. It is expected that his wife will be accosted by the "Count" and that she will be met by the latter should she is possessed.

If the swift Kaiser has an ordinary passage he will arrive in England only a day behind the elusive "Count."

"Count" Guido Costarelli de Gregorio first appeared in Boston a year ago. He set himself up in fashionable Hemenway Chambers and was driven about in his motor car at all of the Summer social functions. A year later he was forced to go through bankruptcy, his liabilities being within a few dollars of $100,000 and his assets nothing. He then wooed and won Maud Murray, a relative of "Admiral dark" Murray, whom he met at several academy homes, where he used his fine baritone voice to good effect while Miss Murray gave recitations. They spent their honeymoon in Sicily, but the new Countess de Gregorio left her American home and, about a year they returned, to live on Mt. Auburn street, Cambridge, and later on Westmoreland street, Roxbury. Then there was a parting, and the Countess obtained a decree of separation. She also secured a divorce, but the rumor was never verified. Of recent years, the "Count" has occupied himself as an automobile sales-man.

Saw Husband Last Monday.

Mr. Lancaster last saw his wife last Monday. She went with him to the Chamberfield Chambers, on Commonwealth avenue, to get some of her mother's belongings to take with her to Mohonk Lake, where her mother was staying. Mr. Lancaster then went to Hartford, intending to proceed from there to Mohonk Lake, but upon telegraphing Mrs. Constable in Hartford learned that Mrs. Lancaster was not at the lake. He returned to Boston, and upon learning of her having taken a train for New York he followed quick ly.

Mrs. Lancaster left no message behind either for her husband or her mother.

Mrs. Harriet Bennet, a sister of Mrs. Lancaster, who is somewhat of an invalid, quam, was amazed and incredulous when told that Mrs. Lancaster had sailed with the "Count." She said:

"I never even heard of such a person as Count Guido Costarelli. If Fannie were acquainted with such a man I should certainly know about it. It is impossible, preposterous, absurd! Only this morning Mrs. Lancaster was expected here at Colonial Cottage to spend a few days. We anticipated her Saturday, but he will surely be here today.

"I should really refuse to so much as discuss such a possibility in connection with my sister. She was devoted to Mr. Lancaster and he to her. I simply can't understand it."

A family friend who has paid particular attention to the "count," expressed the belief that the "count" was using Mrs. Lancaster only as a means to an end. Others have frequently noticed Mrs. Lancaster while in the company of the "count" and have noticed that she seemed dazed, or under influence.

"Looked Like Hypnotist."

"He always made me think of a professional hypnotist, such as one sees perform upon the stage. He had most remarkable eyes. They were usually covered just the sort of eyes that make a foreigner of a certain stamp a danger to unsuspecting women. But occasionally I have seen this fellow's eyes light up with a piercing fire—like his ordinarily would that expression he would bend to bore one through and through.

"I have frequently seen Costarelli in the more conclusive cafes and resorts in both New York and Boston. About two years ago I encountered a certain cafe in New York, and noticing Blanche Bing, the actress, seated at a table, I stopped to speak to her. She had a big and very expensive bouquet of flowers and I asked her where offering they were. She said: 'Count Costarelli gave them to me. Do you know him? And is he a really, truly count?' 'He certainly is not,' I told her. He is a brilliant fourflush and has just been sentenced into bankruptcy.'

"Miss Bing then threw the flowers on the floor in disgust and declared that she should cut him off from her list of admirers. I saw her there that the acquaintance ever went further and usually succeeded in forcing his attentions and gifts upon her.

"When The Great White Way came to Boston he was a nightly visitor to the theatre and usually occupied a box in front. By the way, it was rather curious the way he got his box seats. I noticed several times, and have been informed since by the ushers assigned to the box, that a custom to appear at the theatre about the middle of the performance and purchase an admission ticket.

"He would saunter into the lobby with his cane and immaculate evening dress and inimitable grand manner. After a brief and blase loafing about in the rear of the orchestra stalls he would usually wait until the lights went down during the performance and then walk leisurely down and take a vacant seat. In case an usher happened to be unfamiliar with Costarelli he would start in apparent surprise as if to find somebody in absent-minded blunder and produce the money for a single box seat.

POPE WOULD BUY HOLY SEPULCHRE

LONDON, July 19.—The London Daily Mail's Rome correspondent telegraphs that the Pope has sounded Ghalib Pasha, who is going to London to represent the Sultan at the coronation of Monarch V., the new Sultan of Turkey, as to the possibility of the purchase of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem for removal to Italy. Ghalib Pasha answered that he was without authority to give any promise in the matter.

The Pope, however, is not disposed to let the matter drop, and will seek the good offices of the German Emperor toward the attainment of his end. This same question was raised by Pope Sixtus V. when Sixtus declined to transfer the Holy Sepulchre to Mont Alto, his own birthplace.

MANIAC WHO ESCAPED HELD FOR MURDER

HINGHAM, July 19.—Lawrence M. Nelson of Brockton, an escaped prisoner from the New Hampshire asylum for the criminal insane, was arraigned before Judge Kelley in the local court to-day and held for hearing in the Abington District Court, on the charges of murdering Desire Vanderpell, an Abington farmer. Nelson waived examination, and a continuance of a week was granted. He was taken to the Plymouth Jail.

The killing took place in the yard of Vanderpoll's home, and in sight of his wife. Nelson walked up behind Vanderpoll and fired a revolver from under his shirt. At the first shot Vanderpoll fell, and Nelson fired three more shots in quick succession. All four bullets took effect, but only the wounds, at least would have been fatal.

After firing Nelson walked to the house of one of Vanderpoll's neighbors, and told him he had shot a man. He then took to the woods, but a short time later, while a posse was searching for him, emerged on the road and asked two boys to drive him to a certain point in the city.

He told them of the killing and said he wished to surrender. The boys complied with his request, and he quietly gave himself up.

Had Twice Escaped.

Although an escaped maniac, Nelson had been in this vicinity without restraint for about a year. He had twice escaped from the New Hampshire institution, where he had been committed after an insanity. He had worked for a farmer named Vanderpoll in Abington, and for a week had been practicing with the revolver.

Vanderpoll, who was a widower, left a widow and five children ranging in age from two and a half to fifteen years of age.

Vanderpoll and Nelson had had no quarrel, Nelson, in explaining his act, said that he had worked for Vanderpoll the former threw acid on him and poisoned his food.

According to Nelson's mother, Mrs. Charles Smalley of No. 86 Green street, Brockton, her son had a delusion that some one was going to murder him. She says that he escaped from the State Asylum for Insane from the Philippines, where he suffered a sunstroke and malaria.

Early to-day before Nelson was taken from the Brockton police station to the Hingham court, Mrs. Smalley visited Nelson. To her he said:

"I didn't know what I was doing, mother. I'm sorry, but I guess it won't be with you much longer. Don't worry about me any more."

Brother Gets Revolver.

The revolver with which Nelson did the shooting was taken from the room of his brother Horace, who lives at No. 36 Green street. On Saturday Nelson went to the room, broke open a trunk, forced two doors to get in. He took the revolver and 11 rifle shells, but overlooked $70 in bills.

Mr. Will, this one been a great old game. The limit has been high, away up to the roof.

No one has yet been found who knows William Devlin.

Mrs. Nelson Nelson figured in a rescue at Big Meadow Pond, near the scene of the murder, on July 4, when from drowning in the pond Frank Romero.

Mrs. Nelson is a friend Nelson wrote an article for a magazine, entitled "The Adventures of a Soldier," which attracted considerable attention.

HOLD "TAFT BURGLAR" FOR GRAND JURORS

SALEM, July 19.—Charged with breaking and entering and with larceny, Albert R. Dudley, the Boston man arrested on Saturday night after an exciting chase on the estate of William R. Endicott, Jr., next to that occupied by the family of President Taft, pleaded guilty in court here to-day and was held in $1,000 for the grand jury.

When Dudley was arrested he carried a revolver and a flashlight and it was believed that he intended an attack on the house or the President. The prisoner denied that and declared he had broken into the Endicott garage for the purpose of getting something that he could sell, as he was in desperate need.

Dudley was arrested by Policeman Leon Goodline, whose duty it is to patrol the Taft grounds. Dudley said that he came from Springfield originally, but that he had lived at No. 18 Tappie street, Boston, for some time.

It is said that Dudley is a surveyor by profession. He is said to have written a great deal on religious subjects. He also writes poetry, he says.

Behind his arrest is said to be a romance that came to a bitter finish. Dudley was at one time engaged to marry a pretty college girl and the engagement was broken off. That is said to be the cause of his alcohol.

BACKS POLICE IN "DRUNK" WARNING

"That police officers have authority to warn saloon keepers against selling to persons who have been convicted of drunkenness was the ruling of Judge Joseph J. Corbett in the Charlestown court to-day. Judge J. Sullivan, arraigned for intoxication, had complained to the court that Patrolman Leary had been bringing him and other habitues reports not to serve him with drinks. "A police officer has a perfect right to warn saloon keepers not to sell a man convicted of drunkenness and persisting in doing so," said Judge Corbett. "If officers would exercise this right more frequently there would be less drunkenness in this city." The defendant is fined $5." Sullivan appealed and was held in $500.

MIKE DONLIN FLIRTS WITH THE GIANTS

NEW YORK, July 19.—Mike Donlin in New York, no nearer a settlement with Brush and McGraw and a place back in the ranks of the Giants, where his mighty bat is so sorely needed, than he was at the furthermost away of his western vaudeville tour.

"I haven't seen or heard from Brush or McGraw since I returned," said Mike today. "I am going to the country today and to-morrow for a week's rest."

"And then what" he was asked.

"And then it will be time to see where it is now and always has been—right up to the Giants' management," he replied. "They know my terms and if they will grant them I will be on the job at a day's notice."

NEW COLLEGE SPRINT PHENOM

CHICAGO, July 19.—Has little Miami University developed the greatest sprinter in the world? If Miami watches are true and the clockers can be relied upon, Charles J. McCoy has not only equaled 9 4-5 seconds, the world's record for 100 yards, but has cut this several times, negotiating the distance in 9 3-5 and even 9 2-5 seconds.

McCoy is a sturdy youth with the build of a sprinter. He has been training for five years, but not until this Spring could he do better than 10 1-5 for the hundred. This year, however, to a dual meet with the University of Cincinnati, he was caught in 9 4-5, and he repeated this in the meet with Wabtenberg.

Both times McCoy was clocked on a lightning fast track. How he will perform on cinders remains to be seen, for the high spun his toes, which on a cuppy track would retard his speed.

In addition to the hundred in standard time McCoy has stepped 20 yards in 2 1-5 seconds, also the world's record. Stories of performances from the record are numerous at Miami, and the persistence with which it is stated that McCoy has run the hundred in 9 2-5 seems to indicate that he will startle the athletic world this Summer.

SPRINT RACES ARE POPULAR IN ATHLETICS

Yankee athletic patrons, like the athletes themselves, ever favor fast racing.

Accordingly the sprints are the most popular of the races on the track as far as America is concerned. Rarely do we find an American youth that at some time or other does not think that with ready leg, he would be a sprint champion. It is thus very important that this large army of sprint aspirants should begin right. Every effort in sprinting should be made in the direction of speed. The body should be held slightly forward so that it will aid the runner and give him a purchase for the great efforts he should make to run fast. But the incline of the body should not be too much forward or this will have a tendency to make the athlete clip his stride and thus lose distance and consequently speed, on the other hand, the head and body should not be held back, for this fixes one up and also shortens the stride. The leg motion should be straight forward and the foot should not be flung up high in front. The knee should be flung up and forward and the foot should hit the ground fully outstretched. It should not hang in the air, as is sometimes the case, for lots of course is time and reduces the speed.

The base should not be bent when at full stride, for then the stride is cheapened and again speed is lost. The whole effort of the leg should be straight ahead. The arms should work in unison with the body. If anything, the arms should be quicker than precede the leg motion, thus accelerating the stride. If, as sometimes occurs, the leg motion precedes the arm motion and body then the legs are helping the arms and the full benefit of the arm motion is lost. Generally speaking, it may be said the more nearly every muscle in the body works together, the better. These remarks on form in sprinting apply with equal force to the longer events.

Sprinting is a very intense sport, and it is imperative that the mind should be kept right on the work in hand. Every thought, every muscle, should be bent on getting forward until momentum is at its height.

BOSTON TYPO TEAM IN BENEFIT GAME

All ups for the benefit game at the Huntington avenue grounds to-day. The Boston Typo. B. Baseball News and Notes

When Leon Ames is going right, and that keep on long the loop ball of his is working he keeps them all guessing. Control is the only thing which seems to bother Ames.

All the good batters nowadays are passed when they get in extreme position. Jimmy Austin is not a pitcher deliberately walks a man those on second base. I feel sure that Austin would be a fine manager, and in no way likely that this rule will go through for some time.

Bob Gaudey is playing a great trailer game for the Athletics today than he was all for the Nationals.

"What's the matter with somebody acted him recently.

"Don't know," replied Gaudy. "I am it a question of environment. That was a big figure in baseball, William Lelbold of the Mobile Club, estate over in Washington, but I seemed out of place over there. I feel more at home with Connie."

"How did you happen to discover Eddie Collins?" somebody asked Connie Mack.

"I didn't discover Collins," said Mack. I met took somebody's word for it that he could hit, signed him and then watched him after he got going. Now I've got the best hitter in the league."

Up in Toronto they have a 102 batting for the last season, far and away more than any other batter in either league has ever had.

Young Cy Young, erstwhile Pirate, is pitching amazing ball in the American League. Cy has a in with Minneapolis, a weak hitting team, but has landed a goodly percentage of his starts. Recently he got second out of a wild pitcher's game and then retired the side on three pitched balls. Another American team that was pitched to was Grandon and Minneapolis was handily. If Cy continues to show the same earnestness in his work he will be back in the big show.

Another form several is that shown by Eddie Karger, who is with St. Paul. Karger has pitched the former big leaguer has failed but once he made good. He is taking good care of it has sold.

Fred Clarke is well on in years and was in the big leagues long before most of his compeers of today. Yet none of the latter can keep up down the field and get a fly ball any better than he can right now.

According to Omaha dispatches Richie and Brown were "benched" and were "rewarded" when Manager Murray swapped them to the Sioux.

Nothing appears to be able to stop Pittsburg. The Pirates are going at a fast clip and will be more likely to increase their lead every day than less general. The National League race seems to be settled as far as the championship is concerned.

It is strange how evenly matched the American League teams are every season. Take the race for runner between the Athletics, Tigers, Nats and Red Sox with the Yanks, Browns and White Sox having a fighting chance.

President Rhoads is going like a house afire now. He is out to get the good men and the chances are to date are: Wheat, outfielder, from Montreal; Myers, shortstop, from Jersey City; Pfeffer, a pitcher, from Brooklyn.

Tommy Turnbull, released by the Washington American League team to the Minneapolis Club, of the American Association, is batting .318 and is expected to return to the big league. He objects to the $2,400 salary offered and also says he has a bad arm.

To give you an idea of how much a hitter like Joe Jenkins is needed by the Senators, the club records how that those two fellows between them in nearly 200 times at bat produced 1 run.

Ban Johnson says that the Eastern clubs of the American League will play Sunday games in a few days.

The Detroit Tigers are trying their best to beat Cobb up and grab the American League pennant. Manager William Leibold of the Mobile Club of the Southern League is on his way to join the Tigers. The Detroit team gets Rube Oldring, Jack Lapp and Allen. The estimated price is $6,500.

"Ty" Cobb, the Georgia player on the Detroit American League team, has become fierce over baseball, will at the end of the present season, it is reported, retire from baseball and devote his time and efforts to establish a permanent business, and to that end has purchased a handsome farm near Macon, Ga., and is negotiating for a place of business in Macon, Ga.

Miller of Pittsburg is a smooth workman with his hands on ground balls. Like Oscar he spreads them out to make a barricade and the ball rolls into them.

GOOD IN HER CLASS.

H. K. Devereux's trotting mare Teasel, 2.10½, broke her own record when she trotted a mile in 2:06, all heats, at Readville on July 6. Grove was never able to drive her without she had company. The time could have been 2:02, and her work makes Teasel look like a dangerous one in the 2:10 classes. She stepped the final quarter in 30½ seconds.

TRAINING FAST COLTS.

Trumpetal and Ed Custer, two of the colt wonders of their day, are again in training. They are in the stable of Mal Williams at Galesburg, Ill.

HURLS HAMMER 183 FEET 8 INCHES

NEW YORK, July 19.—In an exhibition of throwing the 16-pound hammer at Ulmer park, Matt McGrath of the New York A. C., sent the missile 181 feet 2 inches and followed with 183 feet 8 inches. These throws beat Flanagan's recent record of 180 feet, but neither will be recognized by the A. A. U., as they were not made in competition.

RECORDS OF LEADING PLAYERS IN BIG LEAGUES

Phenomenal Hitting of Collins of Athletics Puts Him Up as Leader of Both Leagues.

Eddie Collins continues his great work as the batting leader of the American League, and on latest reports was the star of the whole business. He is hitting .378, and the terrible Wagner, leader of the National League, is batting .376, so that the younger performer is a shade to the good for purposes of comparison. Next to the remarkable record of Collins, that of Lajoie is the most notable in the American League, while Cobb is now coming up at a furious gait and is already pasting them for .337, with every prospect of rising still higher.

The Athletics—mainly on account of Collins's individual work—leads the league in team batting, having even beaten out the Tigers. Cleveland and the White Sox are tied for team fielding honors, while the Athletics excel in extra base performances. Sam Crawford is the star individual slugger, and Cobb has a very large margin to have running.

Eight Boston players are batting better than .250, some being first with a percentage of .318.

NEWSPAPER TEAM PLAYS BENEFIT GAME

The Newspaper Baseball Team, champions of the United States, will meet the South Boston Red Sox, one of the fastest teams in this vicinity, at the American League Grounds this afternoon at 3:30, the proceeds to go to the widow of the late Augustine McGrath, an ex-president and ex-secretary of Boston Typographical Union No. 13. These teams have met three times this season, and the games have all been closely contested, so a hot session is in prospect. The rosters for both teams will be out in force to cheer for their favorites.

SEVERE TEST OF SPEED.

The 440-yard run is a severe test of speed and endurance. Form is very important in the quarter-mile brush. The pace is so fast in this race that an easy stride is a necessity. Maxie Long, holder of the world's record of 47 seconds, was perfect for the quarter. His style combined length of stride with ease of action, and he was thus able to keep up a very fast pace for the full distance. The quarter-mile should have a long swinging easy gait.

FAST YOUNG TROTTER.

Lou McDonald has worked the two-year-old filly by Todd-Morning Bells, by How Bells, a mile in 2:18. Nothing presentious in the way of size, but Lou thinks well of her. She is owned by David Look of New York.

GERMAN HORSEMAN AFTER TROTTERS

NEW YORK, July 19.—Robert Grossman, of Berlin, Germany, has arrived in this city and expects to spend two or three weeks here and at the various trotting meets at the various trotting centres. Mr. Grossman is one of the foremost trainers and drivers on the other side and is here for the purpose of buying one or more trotters when he returns to Germany. In May he won the German Derby with the three-year-old brown colt Glucksstern, by Alentell 2:20½, son of Axtell 2:12, out of Pearl Belle 2:26, by Bermuda 2:20½, the race being at a distance of two miles, which the youngster covered at the rate of about 2:25. The purse is worth 30,000 marks and was trotted at Berlin.

DOVES BATTLE WITH REDS IN SECOND GAME

"Give the new week a good send off" was the greeting Harry Smith, the Doves' new boss, gave his players when they assembled for morning practice. By a "good send off" Harry meant "hand the Reds another defeat."

The poor Cincinnati Reds were more than a hundred good points behind the Giants and Chark Griffith had hopes of getting up closer on the New Yorkers by winning in good style from the Doves. He was not expecting any such ball playing as the Doves handed out on Saturday, and of course it didn't make a hit with him. Griff is anxious to get square for the trimming he got during the tables this afternoon. Griffith, it is tipped off, has been after a member of the Doves and rumor has it that he is trying to pass the bunk on the Boston management for one of their best ball players. Griff put a quietus on this line of talk by saying that he has no deal on with Dovey whereby he will get one of the Boston Nationals. However, Griff says that he wouldn't mind having a couple of the good players if he could get them.

Since the Johnny Bates and Charlie Starr deal there have been rumors that there will be other clubs after the Dove star players, but John Dovey says that he will not make any more trades and that he thinks the one just made is a good affair, naturally, or it wouldn't have been pulled off.

If the Doves can only keep up the pace they set in the first game of the series there is a chance of their not finishing in the cellar on this home trip, which will be a hard one when the Doves start in and they get off well on this campaign by trouncing St. Louis. Then after a long and tiresome collected five straight scalps from the Dovey players, thus putting them to the bad. Now if they can swipe one or two more contests from the Reds they will not be so low in the percentage column when they finish up with the Pirates, who will be the next visitors to the Hub. That line of dope listens pretty good, now see if the Doves can stick to it.

HARRIMAN'S HORSES WIN.

E. H. Harriman's colors are beginning to be prominent. At Honolua, N. J., the railroad man's stable, driven by Budd Murray, swept the card. The Latter to Jay Mettregor, took a record of 2:18¾; Weston, by John R. Gentry, clipped off the 2:15¼, while Silver Gentry, another son of the little red horse, obtained a maiden mark of 2:17¼.

GLIDDEN TOUR DRIVERS OFF AFTER REST

By J. C. KERRIGAN.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 10.—After two days of the greatest and most strenuous entertainment that it has ever been the lot of Glidden tourists to receive, the participants in the A. A. A. tour started off on the second leg of the trip this morning.

Ostensibly the two days' stop in this city was intended as a period of rest for the men, but in reality it was fully as strenuous and exacting as the drive would have been. The members of the Minneapolis Automobile Club were most persistent in keeping the tourists up and about.

It has been one long, everlasting session of entertainment, commencing on Friday night with a reception until the cars left this morning.

When the men came to start out this morning they were fully as tired, if not more so, as they would have been had they clung to the wheel during the last two days. They all regretted leaving the city, but duty called them Denver-wards, and Denver was the course of the tour took its flight.

Short Day's Trip.

This is the shortest day's trip of the entire tour, the distance to be covered being only 132 miles to Mankato, where another reception awaits the men who are seeking honor and glory.

The first eighty miles of the tour is over excellent roads, but the remainder is over gumbo roads, which, if it rains, will surely cause havoc among the cars, especially since the schedule calls for an average speed of twenty miles an hour.

Chairman Hower says the real test is now coming, and that the run to Denver will be the crucial one. Should it rain, he is confident that not a single car will reach Denver with a perfect score. Otherwise there will be no difficulty.

The lands of trees and shrubs are to be left behind and a good long trip across the rolling and alkali prairies is to be undertaken before the end is in sight.

Premier Car First Away.

The start this morning was delayed somewhat, the first of the competing cars being sent away at 8 o'clock, the first car to be checked out being the Premier, driven by Jay Webb, and which car has done exceptionally good work since the start of the tour.

Right at his rear came Frank Wing, the only Boston entrant, at the wheel of the Marmon, which, by the way, retains the top that it carried at the very start of the contest. The Pierce team was well up among the leaders, as was also the Chalmers Detroits.

The men are all in the very best of spirits and are looking forward with great anticipation to the run to Denver, where, it is said, everything will be thrown wide open for them.

George Soithson, the driver of one of the Studebaker pleasure car, who was injured while putting out a forest fire on Thursday last, has so far recovered as to be again able to drive his car, and his reappearance in the tour was hailed with delight.

FAST GREEN MARE DEAD.

Lady Marion, by Rocko, 2:29¾, a promising green trotter, in the stable of Frank Cares at Detroit, dropped dead recently. She had been working her extra fast, the fourth of which was in 2:17. In her next mile, while about twenty-five yards from the wire, she collapsed. She was being trained for the 1910 stakes.

"UNCLE DAVY" BRED HIM.

Some booster, who recently acquired half-mile track record of 2:18¾, in a winning race, is the best trotter by Charley Herr, 2:07, that has yet come to hand. Of course, he was bred by "Uncle Davy" Cahill.

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

DID YOU NOTICE HOW YOUNG CORbett "came back" in his fight with Johnny Frayne? Getting trimmed beautifully and for keeps by a boy who has never fought anyone but second raters doesn't look like the one-time marvel of the flesh world had come back to any extent. Take it from me that they never come back. After a fighter has fought a lot of battles and then takes life easy for a few years, the best thing he can do is to stay out of the ring. He may look for a minute or two as if he had arrived again, but the history of the game shows that this look lasts only for a minute. Here's a tip handed me by some of the wisest in the business. Jeff is like all the rest of them, and if he ever DOES get into the ring with a good man, he'll get his and get it pleuty.

I HOPE HONEY MELODY WILL BE good when he reads this. Mon Dieu, Honey, why not not be a game sport and give Marcel a crack at you, even if he does spring a little savate on you and nail both feet abaft your solar plexis. Don't try to excuse again, or Marcel might do it he threatens and "break the Melody neck." He means it too. I can tell that by the tremulous quaver in his handwriting. Here is Marcel's letter:

Editor of Sports, American in Boston.
I am Marcel Moyen, French champion 134 English pounds. I challenge Honey Melody for 20 rounds or less, for the light heavyweight championship of America. I will back my self in the America. MARCEL MOYEN, French Champion

THERE IS A YOUTHFUL LONG distance runner in the Western part of the state who may make a lot of the A. A. A. marathoners look to your laurels. His name is Eric R. Jackson and his home is at Orange. He is only eighteen years of age, but a lot of wise ones who have seen him in action, predict great things for him. He has accumulated quite a bundle of trophies in various competitions, but is pretty wise at that. He says he is going to keep away from the full Marathon course until he has added a year or two to his age, and then he believes he will be able to make the best of them hump themselves.

N. B. M., LOWELL—You'd better cut out some of that stuff you are feeding your glad young face before getting to bed. Running bases in your sleep is a dangerous game. A ball player named Graham did that last year in Seattle, Wash., and got into trouble. He dreamed he was sliding to the plate with the winning run, took a high dive from the bed and rammed his head against a bureau. He broke both, and since then his wife harnesses him to the side rail of the bed every night, as she had to purchase a new bureau. You'd better be careful, as furniture is expensive.

DIG DOWN INTO THE OLD TRUNK in the attic, you old timers, and get out the long discarded uniform, cap and mitt. Also take a turn in the back yard with the kids and get the kinks out of your throwing arm, for Wednesday is "Old Timers' Day" at Peddock's Island. The baseball game to be played that afternoon is expected to go down in history as THE great gathering of has-beens, and many an old timer will expand his chest all the way down on the boat telling what he used to do and then get on the ball field and show what he can't do. There will be nine regular players on each side and the number of substitutes carried by each team is limited to twenty-six. President John I. Taylor has been taking lessons from Jake Stahl and will hold down the first sack for one of the teams; Tim Murnane threatens to play short and Cardinal Bill Daly will do the honors behind the bat for John Phillip sot at the head of the band.

P. S. "The motto for the return trip is: 'That's what they all say.'"

Will you kindly tell me what Pitcher Cy Young's record is and how many games he won the season of 1905? How long has he been playing and was he always a star? Also what good pitcher did Boston get in exchange for him?
FRANK J. WILSEY.
Cambridge.

You must be playing your first season in the big league, Frank, or you wouldn't be asking foolish questions. Any kid in Boston could tell you, but here goes: Cy won fourteen games and lost six, giving him a percentage of .700. This is his twentieth year in the game, and he has always been a shining star. Charley Check was received in the trade, but I'll leave it to the fans as to how good he is.

THAT WAS SOME BASEBALL GAME when the Norfolks of Dorchester defeated the Ramsdells of Allmont by a 24-inning contest on the Ashmont playground Saturday. The score was 6 to 5 and when the winning run was made it was almost too dark to see the ball. The youthful age of the kids is fourteen years and I'll wager that more than one of them, after he had trailed home tired out but happy, accepted dad's remarks about "baseball vs. the woodpile" as proof of the old man's peevish disposition.

WHEN "AN OLD SPORTING MAN" in New York attempted to put the solar plexus punch in the same class with the ulna and the os magnum, he got in bad. The Associated O. S. M. in an interview printed in this paper last week declared that Fitz never landed the solar plexus on Corbett in that famous soiree at Carson. Listen to this from a man who was there and who rode with Corbett back to Frisco:

"Two minutes after the fight we were aboard the Examiner special. It made the run to Frisco. Corbett was a passenger, as the papers' situation and with him Dr. Murphy, public physician. They had the dressing room at the end of the car, the door of which was kept carefully closed. Bill Naughton, sporting editor of the Examiner, was busy at his typewriter hammering out the story of the fight when the Doc passed through the car to the dressing room. Some one

Naughton looked up from his work and asked how the defeated pug was feeling.

"Oh, he's good," answered the Doc. "That was a bad blow he got over the heart."

"That so," said Naughton. "Was that the punch that put him out?"

"I think it was," said the physician. "You see, it was this way. Corbett's head and shoulders were down back and his head a full foot of a beat pressed against the ribs. The blow was delivered from over the left side and for a moment gave the patient a pain filled with poisonous gases, which caused him to be down for a few seconds longer than the limbs on his right side as he—"

"What's that solar business again, Doc, let me have it slow."

"Solar plexus. You mean."

"Solar plexus. That's a peach," and then and there Naughton wove it into his story.

In a game of ice baseball can a change of players be made after the game begins unless in case of injury? Please answer in a hurry.

Such is where I balk. Take a look at the thermometer and then be glad you're not near enough so I could make you shiver. When it gets so I can sleep without the electric fan I'll answer your question.

Sport Dope, Boston American:
Which is the better ball player, Matheson of New York or Brown of Chicago? What were their records last year?
FAN.

I might get in bad trying to say which is the best this year. Last season Matheson won thirty-seven and lost eleven, while Brown won twenty-nine and lost nine. If you haven't time to figure this, Matheson's percentage was .771 and Brown's .763.

Is a player given a safe hit when he hits a ball and it flies over the fence and comes back on the pitcher's box? Please quote the rule on this, and oblige.

He get a hit. Here is the rule: A base hit shall be scored when a fair hit ball strikes the person or clothing of the umpire or a base runner on fair ground.

FRISCO NEWSPAPERS SAY THAT Ketchel did not train properly for his recent mill with Papke; that he was overconfident and spent a greater part of his time during the week before the battle in riding about town in his motor car and opening cold bottles for himself and friends. But Ketchel's narrow escape from a draw or a defeat on points will probably serve as a lesson. Willus Britt, his manager, says that Ketchel will take no such chances again and will always be in the best condition. His training for the Johnson fight will have to be free from joy rides and late suppers.

COIN IS EASY IN AMERICA, SAYS DORANDO

GENOA, July 10.—"America is a great country to make money; also to make fun in," is the concrete opinion of Dorando, the Marathon winner. "Both easy," he adds. "You make the money, other people make you the fame."

Dorando, on landing at Genoa, was immediately assailed by 120 Italian reporters and almost mobbed by his enthusiastic compatriots, who seemed to want to carry him bodily off the vessel.

Nearly every reporter bore the invitation of his paper for Dorando to write articles at whatever price he pleased on his experience in the United States. Dorando replied that he intended to remain in Italy only two months before returning to London, thence going to New York, but that he would do all he could gratis during that period.

"I made enough money over there," protested Dorando, "to last a long time."

Twenty thousand dollars—and that means 100,000 francs—is the sum the little negro he has picked up in the United States. Boswell Woodsack, No. 20 Wexford street, city.

40 BOSTON YACHTS OFF FOR PORTLAND

ISLES OF SHOALS, July 18.—About forty racing boats of the Boston Yacht Club's fleet got away from here early today on the third leg of their racing cruise with Portland as their destination. There was a good breeze and the weather was good, so that quick time is excepted for the thirty-eight miles.

The three prizes for the run from Gloucester, silver clocks, are now doing duty in the cabins of the Timandra, Nutmeg and Chiquo. But those trophies from Commodore Douglass were not won without some sharp racing, for at least one was in doubt until the corrected time was made. This was in Class B, where A. C. Jones's Nutmeg won by about four minutes over the Marie L. George Lee's entry in the race. The Chiquo, winner of Class A, is owned by R. K. Dyer, and she had about nine minutes corrected time to spare over the Gobbo, L. F. Soule's boat, which came in second.

The Timandra, winner of Class C, and owned by J. R. Fallon, Jr., got by with about seven minutes to spare on the corrected time, but she had a hard race up the line with the Golden Rod, owned by G. E. Bruce, and the Shiyossa IV., the thirty-foot craft of Alfred Douglass. The Shiyossa got the Golden Rod by sixteen minutes and the Timandra by twenty-two, but her plucky rival fought the smaller boats a big allowance, and she had to take third place after the Timandra and the Golden Rod.

GOLF GOSSIP
NEWS OF THE LINKS

Mike Brady, the professional of the Commonwealth Country Club has gone to the professional's berth at the Tedesco Golf Club, where he will spend the Summer.

His performance in the open championship has made no place too good for him. His position at the Commonwealth will be taken by John Donaldson of Newton High and a schoolboy golfer.

In the matches held at the Brookline C. C. the other day between the Brookline team and the Commonwealth six, the results of a six for either side hinged on the match between J. W. Keaney and Arthur Lyons of Commonwealth, vs. J. Arnold and F. Cutter of Brookline. The Commonwealth pair won finally in a splendidly played match, the fourteenth hole being required to do the trick. Commonwealth won four matches two points to one. The singles matches will be played at Commonwealth later in the week.

Schoolboy and college golfers seem fond of doing a match in brown when they play finals. In the recent interscholastic tournament Francis Ouimet, the winner, defeated Ronald Waitt 10 up and 9 to go in the finals, while B. P. Merriman, the Connecticut champion, and Yale golf team captain, put H. L. Jackson out of the finals with 11 up and 10 to play.

The Wide Department has made provisions for the establishing of golf links at the posts where the soldiers are stationed. These links will be for the exclusive use of the army men at those posts. Polo posts have also been bought to encourage that sport at the posts.

ELMO II. WINS POWER BOAT RACE IN STORM

MARBLEHEAD, July 19.—Soaked to the skin and weak from withstanding the downpour of rain during the two hours of terrific thunder storm which followed them from Cape Cod to this port over a rough and tumbling sea, the skippers and crews of the fleet of 12 motor boats in the 285 mile ocean race from Bay Ridge to Marblehead Light, crossed the finish line shortly before noon.

They gladly welcome the shelter of the Eastern Yacht Club house, the Elmo II., owned by F. D. Giles, Jr., which had been delayed 2 hours 25 minutes and 30 seconds, being declared the winner.

The Lizzie L. owned by C. O. Lallor, with a handicap allowance of 2 hours 27 minutes 5 seconds, was second; and the Irene II., owned by W. Lewis, was third in last year's race, with a time allowance of 9 hours 59 minutes 30 seconds, was third.

Two of the boats, the Miole and the Barbara, had not appeared at the early hour for the finish of the race, the scratch boat, was accounted for by the report of her having been in Duxbury Bay last night, the scratch boat, Northerner, quit at Gravesend Bay, while the Miss Nobleshaw—Commodore Wilson and fleet Captain Walter H. Skyes, of other prizes. The start was made from Bay Ridge at 10:40 yesterday morning, and except for a short run at the start and finish, the race was on the ocean.

When the boats reached Cape Cod about 6 o'clock in the morn they struck into a heavy electrical storm. The lightning played over the waters and the thunder rolled, while the rain came down in torrents and drenched all aboard to the skin. The seas were choppy and engines were taxed to their utmost to make headway in the surf.

The men at the wheels were not only obliged to face a downpour, but their own bows, but in addition and to contend with the dangerous and frequent shifts because necessary on the stretch up to Marblehead. The storm broke with full force when the light was reached the crews were heartily thankful.

The Josephine was the first boat to cross across the finish line, coming in at 6:30:45 p. m., being followed an hour and a half later by the Miss Nobleshaw and Elmo II. It was nearly three hours later before another boat showed up, when the Irene II., Kitrois and Square Deal crossed the line in that order.

FELL DEAD IN RACE.

Then fell dead in her Woodstock, N. B., race was Mrs. Edith Due, coming in at 6:30:45 p. m., being followed an hour and a half later by the Miss Nobleshaw and Elmo II. It was nearly three hours later before another boat showed up, when the Irene II., Kitrois and Square Deal crossed the line in that order.

Man of 40 Marries Girl 9

"The Women of India, Fighting to Escape from the Barbarous Custom of Child-Marriages, Need the Help of American Women"

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

A GREAT hour has struck on the Clock of Time. Progress, always marching onward, even when he seems to stand still or retrograde, has made gigantic steps forward for the human race in the last two years.

Everywhere in the great world, the RIGHT OF WOMAN TO FREEDOM is a subject which is beginning to agitate the public mind.

The rise of the women of Turkey has astonished the race; and that is but the beginning of the movement which has occult forces as well as political powers back of it.

"East and West," a magazine published at Bombay, India, contained a remarkable article in the September number, by Durgeskanar Raval of Gongal, India, entitled, "An appeal to the Princes and People of Kathiwad on Behalf of Their Daughters."

Many of the high caste people from India will tell you that the condition of women is quite as safe, sane and desirable in India as it is here in America.

They will tell you that their men love and protect their women as much as the better classes of men do here; and that they keep them from the hardships and turmoil of life in the sanctity of home, and do not permit them to suffer the wear and tear of life or stand in the glare of publicity, simply because they hold them too high.

A Native's Testimony

Quite likely there are such men; undoubtedly there are loved, protected, happy women in India, who would not like to change places with any of the American wives or mothers.

But here is another side to the story as given by one of the educated and representative men of the "New India" of to-day:

"Whenever we try to take a passing glimpse into the real life of Indian homes, whenever we picture to ourselves the dull monotony of those secluded interiors that form the "heart" of society, as it were, we find a ghastly, repellent picture of ignorance, superstition and credulity—all dwelling incarnate in our living idols—the presiding Deities of our homes—who are expected to be the guardian angels of an advancing society, whom we look upon as mothers of the future race of Indian saints and patriots that are destined to raise our motherland from the lowest depths of degradation to the high level of her enlightened sisters like England, Japan or America!

"If such is the social status, such the menial gloom of the better half of our nation, what shall I say of the other half—I dare not say the worse half? No substantial results can be gained in any field of reform unless the "hearts" are thoroughly purified. This stands true in the case of white nations as of single individuals. But the "hearts" of our society (nurseries, I mean) are rotten from within; they are like gloomy vaults wherein every virtuous flies in terror at the approach of husbands of fifty or sixty coaxing their child-wives into submission, though fit to be playmates of their grandfathers; spectacles of tender virgin-widows slaughtering their little ones in cold blood even before they have seen the light of day, or themselves forced to swallow poison by the once fond parents whose sole delight they once were."

Remember this is not written by an American or English visitor, but by a native born Hindu. And more wonderful is a paper read by a high-caste Hindu lady on December 30, 1908, Mrs. Visvanatha, of Madras, India. The following extract is but a small portion of this remarkable paper:

"Marriage of girls is a subject which pertains to our sex, our sisters feel the evils of early marriage, and I believe that we have, therefore, a right to speak about it.

"Till recently we have not had gatherings of enlightened ladies, such as we are now having, and there was no opportunity given us to put forth our views on this important subject.

"If we (women) do not complain of the evils resulting from marrying our girls before puberty, if we do not sympathize with our suffering sisters, I ask, Who else can do so with propriety and justice?

"In consequence of this evil custom of early marriage, the Hindus, as a race, are degenerated. For want of energy and physical strength they have ceased to occupy a lower place in the scale of nations.

"Is there nothing in our own hands that we could apply to remedy it, or at least to modify the prevailing custom?

"If all the mothers in the land raise their voice, however feeble it may be, against this custom and use their influence, or desist, if need be, from becoming a party to it, or withhold their wilful consent to such a practise of fiendish cruelty, it will assuredly lead to a wholesome result.

"We ought to use our influence in our sex mainly and with our own people to prevent here over the marriage of our little girls.

"Mine is not the only mouth that speaks to you or beseeches you to action, but believe me that there are thousands of these young sufferers of early widowhood at my back, on whose behalf I plead.

"It is only then that we may be said to fulfil the duties of sisterhood, and to render services to the rank of builders of a strong and healthy nation of Hindus."

When we read such words as these from a native of India, and then of Turkey, Persia, Egypt, Morocco and China, where women's condition is one of comparative slavery, it makes the troubles, worries and deprivations of the average American woman's life seem trivial indeed.

An American woman, not long ago, was heard to make a bitter complaint of her unhappy lot, because her husband did not accompany her to the theatre, or make calls with her.

This is a mistake on the part of a man, and the mistake he oftenest realizes only after the sympathetic "affinity" has appeared on the scene; but compared with the life of a woman in India or Turkey, the lot of the lonely wife in America, with all the privileges she enjoys in the way of personal liberty, is one of felicity.

In premature marriage, if the boy-husband dies, the child-wife is condemned to widowhood for the rest of her life.

"Early child-birth brings many a young girl to a painful death, or what is worse, to a long lingering life of suffering and misery—a life without hope, without any of the charms and pleasures which make life worth living. Their utmost resources in means of mental and bodily strength fare ill.

"The damnads of motherhood are so large upon the young woman, and are made so long before her bodily strength and growth have arrived at fullness, that they inevitably tell very much upon her health."

Surely there is a greater work for our American women in helping to free these women of India from their awful bondage than in undertaking the conversion of Chinese men in our midst.

This work is already begun.

This is good philanthropic work for the benevolent and the wealthy American women to assist. It has meaning and purpose.

India gave the world a complete and wonderful religion in its marvelous Vedas. They contain all the beautiful truth of all other religions and philosophies; but owing to invasions by foreigners and consequent disorder in the Hindu community, which prevailed for centuries, it was thought desirable to place every young Hindu woman under the protection of some young man and his parents as early as possible, so that her life and property may be safeguarded.

An Appeal for Help

In this way child marriage came into India; and to the centuries which have followed the custom has degenerated into the present frightful conditions, and the once loved and honored women of India have become slaves to a debased and degenerated custom.

They need our help.

An appeal has come recently from Miss Caroline Wallace and Miss Holmes, now in Calcutta, for aid to carry on their work. They can be personally reached by addressing either one at Calcutta, India, care of the "Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China."

In her letter Mrs. Wallace says: "If the Carnegie Hero Fund would give something toward accomplishing this heroic effort to save a whole nation, it would bless the world."

Let the Chinaman in Boston or any other American city find his own road to salvation. He does not need our help. The women of India do need it.

This man, 40 years old, is the husband of this girl, nine years old. Reproduction made from photograph taken in Calcutta, April 27, 1909, by Carrie A. Tenant.

The Matchmaking Nuisance

By ADA PATTERSON

MATCHMAKERS are a nuisance that has no place in this age of intelligence. They belong to a time period of dull perceptions and no discrimination. Nature has left out of them the power to see that some men and women are unmarried because they wish to be.

If the matchmaking person could read the mind of the person he is trying to force into matrimony he would blush at the victim's estimate of him. For the man who doesn't want to wed thinks of the man who wants to make him marry, all the hard things a horse who has been led to the trough and refuses to drink, thinks of the person who has conducted him to the superfluous trough.

There is a fact which all others know, but to which the matchmaker is blind. It is that some human beings are born celibates. The matchmaker has a blind passion for pairing. If men and women don't marry he crudely concludes that it is because they lack intelligence or opportunity, and he assumes to supply both. Matchmakers rush in where persons of delicate perceptions would refuse to enter.

To attempt to make a match for one is a scratchen and paid to do so is a colossal impertinence. Men who have earned millions by their sagacity have been rated by their friends at mental standing so low that they were unable to choose and win a wife. Women who have earned international reputations in art and literature have been regarded by those who knew them best as so defective in their judgment that they were unable to select consort.

Of all the matchmakers I have known among the many hundred men they knew a fit mate. And these brilliant individuals have had to review a strange procession of possible mates furnished gratis by officious friends.

Matchmakers mean well. Most persons out of self or in it mean well.

The matchmakers are of two classes. They are sentimental men or exceedingly practical women. The sentimental matchmaker fears that his friends will miss the softening discipline of family life. The female wants her to be the sharer of some man's purse. The first regrets that the world knocks off as many character angles as the most determined wife, and the second has lost sight of the superior economy in intelligent woman finds for financial independence.

"Better my own whole purse than the grudged half of any man's," is the motto of the bachelor maid.

The matchmaker is as proud of her wedding as Geronimo was of the scalps at his belt. But she is unconscious of two facts that flame their signals to all who look. For every match she has made she has made a dozen pair of enemies.

Besides, the matchmaker claims the honor of having done a thing that would depend without her. Better leave matchmaking to instinct. It is the only successful matchmaker.

This is a confession. I made a match once, convincing a light-headed girl and youth that they were "made for each other." Deeply have I regretted it and ungrateful they have been. Three months after the wedding they separated, and a year afterward were divorced by mutual consent.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THERE was a other argument last night between Pa & Ma. It was about ducks & other little animals. It was Ma's fault, but Pa lost just the same.

When Pa rains home in the afternoon there was one of them Lodge meetings in the living room, it was too eatin order with Ma has belonged to for a long time, the Ladies of the Golden Star, and they are fine people in there own homes, but he doesnt like them in his living rooms.

Husband, and Ma here is our dear friends, you know all of them, I am sure. Yes, said Pa, I know all of them, but I aint sure. What did they ears around here for? said Pa. This is awful hot weather for company, Pa said.

Well, said Ma, they are here today with me to found a society for the prevendsion of cruelty to ducks. It is to be called The Little Sisters of the Helpless & Mute. Grand, said Pa. It is a worthy objek. How much do you want from me to start the ball rolling?

We do not want money, said Ma. All we want is to have all our husbands & all our husband's frends give a pledge that they will never, either by word or deed, harm a insekt. That sounds reasonable, said Pa, show me the pledge. Then Ma read the pledge with his full name & sed to the other ladies. Well, old gals, how do you like the signature? That is a name that stens may a pledge, Pa sed, but no check. What partikar insekt, if any, Pa sed, do you wish me & my frends to let alone. We want you to let them all alone, sed Ma. Polite, sed Pa, while we are at here I will get my frends on the phone & have them cum right here & sign the pledge.

So Pa called up his frends on the phone & Mister Rix calm up, & Mister Crowley, & Mister Wedson, and so on. They was all happy. Pa inter-duced them all to the Dignified Dames. My deer frend Mister Wedson, Pa sed, is a great man, & he will be the first one to sine this pledge that he will never harm a insek. Then Billy Wedson bogan to jig & sang Just It you Will, But You Can Bet I Never Harmed a Fooly Ant Only onst, sed Mister Crowley. Dount you remember that time out in Frisco wen you stepped on a poor littel fly & crushed out its life? Then Mister Wedson bogan to cry. That is so, he sed. It quit cums back to me now like a ghastly dream. (Only in the later years, sed Billy Wendon, I can hear the shreeks of that helpless insekt in my ears. Then he bogan to cry aum mear.

Poor man, sed one (1) of the Dignified Dames. Dount you think he has suffered enuff, my deer sisters? Yes indeed, sed the rest of the ladies. So after Mister Wedson had stopped cyrig & sined the pledge, it was Mr. Crowley's turn. Mister Crowley is a politishun & he is the head & rest of the politishuns, he is very careful what he puts his naim to. Well, folks, sed Mister Crowley, what is the law? If I sine this paper, Mister Crowley sed, do I git myself in Dutch? I will have to read it all through becfore I sine it, Mister Crowley sed. Then he read the paper all through & sed Oh, I guess I can sine this paper all rite. Of course, he sed, it a fly shud happen to lite on my bald hed this pledge dosent go.

Now, sed Ma to Mister Hix, want you to sine this pledge. Mister Hix looked at the pledge & sed I do not wish to harrow you good people, sed Mister Hix, but if I shud sine this pledge I mite be guilty of braking my oath, wich wud be the same as perjury.

Then the eyes of the windows beckame it was a warm nite, & the ladies went out to, & all the Dignified Dames, & Pa, & Mister Crowley, & Billy Wendon, they all killed mos kitoes. The only one (1) who dident kill a mos kito was the man that dident sine the pledge.

I dount believe pledges is any good.

IN THE VERNACULAR

THE late Bishop Potter once in his early days had occasion to officiate at a christening in a small fishing village. The father, a young fisherman, awkwardly holding his first-born daughter, was visibly embarrassed under the scrutiny of the many eyes in the congregation, and his nervousness was not decreased by the sudden wailing of the infant as they stood at the font.

When the time for the baptism arrived the bishop noticed that the father was holding the child so that its fat legs pointed toward the font.

"Turn her this way," he whispered. But the father was too disconcerted to hear or understand.

"Turn her feet around," the bishop whispered again. But still there was no response.

The situation was fast becoming critical when an ancient mariner at the back of the church came to the rescue. Putting his weather beaten hand to his mouth, he roared across the room:

"Head her up into the wind, Jack!"

And she was baptized.

PERHAPS HE MIGHT

AT a party, while a young lady was playing with peculiar brilliancy of touch, a bystander bachelor exclaimed:

"Ya gee the world for those fingers."

"Perhaps you might get the whole hand by asking," said the young lady's father, somewhat nauseas.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

CHAPTER XXII.—(Continued.)

The Incredible Body.

ARSTAD from his obituary by the critics and reports, Larsan opened the window of his chamber and called out to the Gendarmerie, who at once joined us at the same moment, and I cried out to him:

"He is dead!—is dead!"

"So much the better, he said. "Take him into the vestibule of the chateau." Then, as if on second thought, he said: "No!—no! Let us put him in his own room.

Rouletabille knocked at the door. No body answered. Naturally, this did not surprise me.

"He is evidently not there, otherwise he would have come out," said the reporter. "Let us carry him to the vestibule, then."

Since reaching the dead shadow, a thick cloud had covered the moon and darkened the night, so that we were unable to make out the features. Daddy Jacques, who had now joined us, helped us to carry the body into the vestibule, where we laid it down on the lower step of the stairs. On the way, I had felt my hands wet from the warm blood flowing from the wounds.

Daddy Jacques flew to the kitchen and returned with a lantern. He held it close to the face of the dead shadow and we recognized the keeper, the man called by the landlord of the Donjon Inn the Grand Man, whom, an hour earlier, I had seen come out of Arthur Rance's chamber carrying a parcel. But what I had seen I could only tell Rouletabille later, when we were alone.

Rouletabille and Frederic Larsan experienced a cruel disappointment at the result of the night's adventure. They could only look in consternation and suspection at the body of the Great Man.

Daddy Jacques showed a sunphilly sorrowful face, and, with allie lamentations, the keeper repeating that we were mistaken—the keeper would not be the assailant—we were obliged to compel him to be quiet, for he could not have shown greater grief had the body been that of his own son. I noticed while all the rest of us were busy, he undressed and bandaged the wounds he had fully clothed.

Rouletabille had not left the body. Kneeling on the flagstones by the light of Daddy Jacques's lantern, he removed the clothes from the body and laid bare its breast.

Then, snatching the lantern from Daddy Jacques, he held it over the corpse and saw a gaping wound. Rising suddenly, he exclaimed in a voice filled with savage irony:

"The man you believe to have been shot was killed by a stab of a knife in his heart!"

I thought Rouletabille had gone mad, but, bending over the body, I quickly satisfied myself that Rouletabille was right. Not a sign of a bullet anywhere—the wound was made by a sharp blade, had penetrated the heart.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Double Scent.

I HAD hardly recovered from the surprise into which this new discovery had plunged me, when Rouletabille touched me on the shoulder and asked:

"What are we going to do there?"

"To think the matter over."

I confess I was in no condition for doing much thinking, for could I misunderstand how Rouletabille could so control himself as to be able calmly to sit down and reason when he must have known that Mademoiselle Stangerson was at that moment almost on the point of death.

But his self-control was more than I could explain. Closing the door of his room, he motioned me to a chair, and, sitting himself before me, took out his pipe. We sat there for some time in silence, and then I felt asleep.

When I awoke it was daylight. It was the first time in my life Rouletabille was no longer in the room. I rose to go out, when the door opened and my friend reentered. He had evidently lost no time.

"How about Mademoiselle Stangerson?" I asked him.

"Her condition, though very alarming, is not desperate."

"When did you leave this room?"

"Toward dawn."

"I guess you have been hard at work?"

"Rather."

"Have you found out anything?"

"Two sets of footprints."

"Do they explain anything?"

"Yes."

"Have they anything to do with the mystery of the keeper's body?"

"Yes; the mystery is no longer a mystery. This morning, walking round the chateau, I found two distinct sets of footprints, made at the same time, last night. They were made by two persons walking side by side.

"I followed them from the court to the ward room, where I soon joined me. They were the same kind of footprints I had seen at the time of the attempted assault in the Yellow Room—one set was made by a man, and the other was made by a woman, except that the big toe of one of the sets was cut off. I observed also from the one measured in the Yellow Room incident. I compared the marks with the paper patterns I had previously made.

"Still following the tracks of the prints I found I passed out of the ward room and reached the border of the lake. There they turned off to a little path leading to the high road to Epinay, where we lost the traces in the newly macadamized highway.

"We went back to the chateau and parted at the courtyard. We met again, however, in Daddy Jacques's room, to which our separate trains of thinking had led us both. We found the old servant in bed. His clothes on the chair were wet through and his boots very muddy.

Jacques Acts Strangely.

"He certainly did not get into that state in helping us to carry the body of the keeper. It was not raining then. Then his face showed extreme fatigue and he looked at us out of terror-stricken eyes.

"On our first questioning him he took refuge in the usual lame excuse that after the doctor had arrived on the scene he was not speaking the truth, he confessed that he had been away from the chateau.

"He explained his absence by saying that he had a headache and went out into the fresh air, but had gone no further than the end of the park. When questioned as to him the whole route he had followed he said up in bed trembling.

"And you were not alone?" cried Larsan. "Did you see it then? gasped Daddy Jacques.

"What?" I asked.

"The phantom—the black phantom?"

"Then he told us that for several nights he had seen what he kept calling the black phantom. It came into the park at the stroke of midnight and glided stealthily through the trees, it appeared to him in the middle of the court. He followed it to the lake and to the high road to Epinay, where the phantom suddenly disappeared.

"Did you see his face?" demanded Larsan.

"No! I saw nothing but black veils."

"And you got out after what passed on the gallery?"

"I could not! I was terrified!"

"Daddy Jacques," I said, "is a threatening letter going to follow it; you and the phantom walked to Epinay together?"

Maud (tearfully)—Father's just had the gas bill.

Why Percival Objected

By KENNETH HARRIS

"I TOLD her that I would think it over before I decided," said Penelope. "It wasn't because I had any doubt about it being a perfectly splendid thing, but—do you know why I waited, nice boy?"

"Did she say her terms were spot cash on application?" asked Percival.

"I waited to know what you thought of it before I joined," said Penelope.

"It was a noble determination," said Percival. "I appreciate it. I consider that it was magnanimity to the limit. What do you think of it? says you. I think it is a perfectly splendid thing. If you want to know my sentiments, there's they."

"She said that I would see the improvement in myself in less than a week," said Penelope.

"Did you tell me that she was a lady?" asked Percival.

"Quite a lady," said Penelope.

"Then I won't see the more abbreviated and less refined characterization," said Percival. "I will merely comment myself with remarking that it would be impossible to improve you. Did she have the rind to say anything?"

"Of course," smiled Penelope. "She wasn't a goose like you. And dodog you think it would be a improvement if I could add three inches to my biceps and strengthen all my muscles? Just see how strong you are and how weak I am."

Could Pack Totes and Things

"That's true," said Percival reflectively. "It would be if you to dites digging right now you'd make an awful poor showing. I don't suppose you could swing an eight-pound sledge all-hour without taking both hands to it and a hundred-pound pack would use you up before you had toted it fep miles."

"I wouldn't be surprised if it did tire me," said Penelope. "But just think how lovely it would be if I could swing sledge hammers and tote packs and things."

"And that isn't all. She has fencing and boxing and jiu-jitsu in the course. If a burglar came into our house all I would have to do would be to jitsu him and hand him over to the police."

"Between your finger and thumb," supplemented Percival. And if you were at sea and a ferocious pirate tried to cut you with his cutlass, all you would have to do would be to fence without taking it carte or riposte and stretch him at your feet, bathed in gore."

"Oh, Percival, darling!" remonstrated Penelope.

"He'd deserve it, sweetheart," said Percival. "He'd richly deserve it. The boxing would come in handy, too. I can just see you feinting for the head and landing with a wallop in the slats. You'd find that and the jiu-jitsu uncommonly useful bargain days, I should think."

Some Uses for Her Strength

"You never take anything seriously," complained Penelope.

Percival assumed an air of gravity. "I am of the opinion that the course would be rather dreary, dearest," he asserted. "The presumption, of course, is that the exercises that your instructor will prescribe will strengthen the body and increase its natural agility and activity, thus enabling you to do with the utmost ease and even enjoyment strains that heretofore put you to the bad. For instance, you won't mind lightening the labors of the cook by scrubbing the kitchen floor for her, and you will be begging your mother to allow you to do the family washing, and for scouring and dusting and little tasks like those, you will perform them unconsciously."

"Well, if I find things pleasant to do, I shall certainly not mind doing them," said Penelope.

"I am informed by authorities that a young woman who goes in for athletics must make up her mind to sacrifice her waist line," said Percival, solemnly.

"I don't think I should hesitate at any sacrifice if I once made up my mind," said Penelope.

One Consolation to It

"Don't imagine that I wish to discourage you, honey-bird," said Percival. "You must see that I shall be directly helped by your fine new strength, also. I shall like 'em sinewy and others get 'em sinewy. A muscular matron will not require her poor little husband to go down to the basement and jiu-jitsu the furnace. She will be equal to shaking it down and carrying out the ashes herself. She won't call a man away from his paper to beat a rug or unscrew the top of a fruit jar. She'll be glad to find such outlets for her energy."

"If it would save you, darling, I'd gladly do all such things," said Penelope.

"You are a self-sacrificing creature. "But, honey-bird, you don't really and truly, honest-to-goodness, cross-your-heart, mean to go in for that sort of thing?"

"If you don't mind, dearest."

"I'm afraid I do mind, pet," said Percival. "I think I'd sooner tackle the fur trade. Marrying a muscular lady is a awful thing to contemplate for most of us. Now I haven't any doubts or any fears for the future. You are the most blissful anticipation, the most impatient longing. Still, sweetheart, if the worst came to the worst, it would be a great consolation to know I'd got a woman I could lick."

"You are a horrid boy," said Penelope.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NOT NECESSARY EVERY TIME

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:—About one month ago a young gentleman of twenty-one came to my place of business to see the Summer-place of mine. He paid no direct attention to me. He called and left. He met me. He dates taken me out sailing and to other places. Recently he called, and oh, Miss Fairfax, I forgot to ask him to call. Now I am afraid to call. If this gentleman and I have every reason to think he cared for me, how does he think of me now? I never made such a disgraceful mistake before, but when I am with him I forget everything but the thought of his presence. Now, Miss Fairfax, you have helped so many girls, would you not tell me what to do? Would it be not tell me what to do? Would it be not tell to write him a note of apology? I do not want him to think, however, that I run after him. A. B.

If you have given him one cordial invitation to call that is all that is necessary. If he likes you he will come without further invitation. If, however, you feel very badly, you might write a note inviting him for some special meeting. No apology is necessary.

"B" IS RIGHT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:—A" says that when a girl is introduced to a fellow and he volunteers to take her home, and, the request to be call on her. It would be proper for him to ask if he might call on some evening. "B" says if the girl sees that the fellow would like to call, it would be proper for her to say, when he is taking her card for me, I will be pleased to have him call some evening. Kindly settle this dispute and oblige

I. F.

I THINK "B" is right. A girl can always tell when a man is anxious to call. It is quite proper that the man should intimate that he would like to be invited, but if he asked outright if he might call he would put the girl in a rather embarrassing position. She could not very well refuse, and yet she might not be at all anxious to continue the acquaintanceship.

They Talk About "Liberty" for the Indians in India

Heaven Forbid That They Should Know Political Liberty Until They Learn More About Human Decency and Decent Treatment of Women and Children

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

There was a political murder in England the other day. A fanatic Asiatic from the British possessions of India murdered one of the assistants of John Morley, who is at the head of British government in India.

It is probable that Morley himself barely escaped assassination.

This murder was part of an agitation for so-called "liberty" in India—an agitation that has received encouragement among geese and well-meaning, but misinformed, people in America.

Those that think the natives of India should be permitted to govern themselves are invited to think over the history of India, or, what is perhaps, easier, to read Ella Wheeler Wilcox's article, and study the photograph on another page.

British government in India is far from perfect. But it is ideal in comparison with the government that India has had in the past under her own vile rulers.

John Morley, who represents English rule in India, is a dignified, just and noble-minded man. He is worth a million boatloads of all the fat, greasy mystics—Mahatmas, Swamis and other religious vermin—that work to stir up revolution at home and swindle dull-minded women in America and elsewhere.

If the Indians of Asia had their "liberty" they would resume their charming custom of burning alive the young widows of old men.

They would make universal once more such marriages as is shown in the dreadful picture that illustrates Ella Wheeler Wilcox's article.

"Liberty" for the natives of India would mean more of the old rajahs, with their tons of gold, their collections of jewelry, their huge elephants and their populations dying of famine periodically.

The English are fighting the vile child marriages, they have abolished "suttee"—the burning alive of widows—they are educating, as well as they can, the population that once knew only starvation and misery.

Even the women of India are learning, studying, fighting against the hideous customs of the past.

India is a land that has been cursed for ages with a vile, deadening religion. Her priests and rulers have taught the poor man that his case is hopeless; they have taught him to lick the hand that struck him.

To feed the ruler, feed the fat priest and keep down a starved, miserable people—that is the religion that has ground down those wretched Asiatics.

What the people of India need is to get rid of their abominable religion, think for themselves, throw off caste and reject the infamous blasphemy that God intends the earth to be given over to fat rulers and priests supported by half-starved workers.

To give "liberty" to the people of India would simply mean driving them back to the horrible conditions from which European civilization is striving to save them.

You might just as well give over the government of India to those monkeys that enjoy THEIR LIBERTY in the "sacred city" of Benares, or, worse yet, you might as well turn over the government to the filthy "holy man" of Benares, who sits on spikes, in his rags and his filth, taking the money of the fools and teaching the horrid doctrine that it is pleasant to God to see creatures whom he created torture themselves and live unnaturally.

The best liberty for India—the liberty that must come first—is LIBERTY OF THOUGHT. The present agitation is due to the mistake that compares Indian conditions with conditions as they once were in Ireland.

In Ireland the English for years starved and butchered men at least equal to themselves.

In India English rule, defective as it may be, is the only hope of poor creatures whose whole history has been starvation and butchery.

Hiring a Doctor to Keep You Well

Is Practice of "Preventive" Medicine Is Likely to Be the Practice of the Future

It is said that in China physicians are paid for keeping people well, rather than for tending them when they are sick.

And the idea seems so practical that it ought to find ready acceptance in the Occidental nations.

At the meeting of the American Academy of Medicine in Atlantic City some time ago, Dr. Woods Hutchinson read a paper in favor of practising medicine by contract.

His suggestion is that a family doctor should receive a fixed fee by the month or year for supervising the general health of his clients. The fee should be adjusted to the income of the patient, and should cover a semi-annual examination of each member of the family and a sanitary inspection of their dwelling place.

It would seem that the principle involved is a decided advance upon the old practice. If an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, this new scheme of DOCTORING BY CONTRACT ought to beat the old-fashioned therapeutics by about sixteen to one.

It puts the self-interest of the physician in line with that of the patient: while, as things stand, it is a severe strain upon the altruism of the medical fraternity that they fatten and prosper on the leanness and misery of their neighbors.

Thus there can be little doubt that the practice of "PREVENTIVE" MEDICINE is likely to be the practice of the future. The difficulties in the way are the difficulties of unreason—the abounding lack of prudence and foresight.

The progress of the new system is likely to be slow simply because most people haven't IMAGINATION enough to appreciate its immense advantages.

It is to be noted, however, that the contract system of medical practice has already made considerable headway in factories and fraternal societies.

Its general prevalence can be only a question of time.

Success After Failure

MOHAMMED

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

NOTE.—The seething of the Mohammedans of Persia, Morocco and of Turkey adds interest to the career of the Prophet, the attitude of the church he founded having much to do with liberal success in these peoples' struggles.

THE story of the world's successful men which should leave out of the account the achievements of the founder of Islam would be a most imperfect affair. Few greater men than Mohammed have ever been born into the world, and than the famous old Arabian Prophet no more courageous soul ever stood up to battle against great odds for victory.

Mohammed (born about 570 A. D.) was left an orphan in his infancy, and might have perished in his poverty and helplessness but for the kindness of his paternal uncle, Abu Talib.

The old man, though generous, had a large family and was very poor, and the little nephew necessarily grew up in the midst of hardship and toil.

After spending some twenty-five years herding sheep and camels in the desert, Mohammed entered the service of a rich widow named Khadija, for whom he made many commercial journeys into Palestine and Syria, and whom he later married, much to his profit, for, in addition to her wealth, Khadija was a wonderfully good and sensible woman, and made him a most excellent wife.

Mohammed was by nature a man of large idealism, and it was already as good as settled that he was not to remain satisfied with the wretched condition of Arabian religion. That religion was in miserable shape. The rank and file were little better than fetish worshippers, while the upper crust was literally honeycombed with unbelief in all things spiritual and divine.

The situation mightily grieved the soul of Mohammed, and, absorbed in the subject, he retired to the desert to meditate upon the spiritual depths to which his people had fallen, and after a time (so he claimed) the angel Gabriel sent him a message, the first word of the "Koran."

It is impossible to say whether Mohammed really believed this, or whether it was simply a dodge that he resorted to with the object of obtaining a better hearing, but at any rate he proclaimed the new revelation.

His wife believed him, as did also the three or four members of his own house, but the aristocracy of Mecca, who had the controlling interest in all things Arabian, ridiculed the prophet, and commanded his uncle to put a muzzle on him.

When informed by Abu of the command that had been given him, Mohammed replied: "Though they give me the sun in my right hand and the moon in my left to bring me back from my undertaking, yet will I not pause till the Lord carry my cause to victory." Then Abu answered: "Go in peace, son of my brother, and say what thou will, for, by God, I will never abandon thee."

The Meccans continued to growl, but the people of Medina were disposed to listen to him, and in that city he found some converts. For twelve years the prophet continued to preach, and by 622 A. D. his followers numbered only a handful, mostly of the men of Medina.

During that year the "machine" at Mecca declared Mohammed an outlaw and set a price on his head. Whereupon the prophet made the historic "flight" from Mecca to Medina. Not after him came the infuriated Meccans, and but for the hiding place that was afforded by the friendly cave of Thour the defenseless fugitive would have been dispatched then and there.

Crouching in the cavern, the prophet's sole companion exclaimed despairingly: We are but two, Master," "There's another," replied Mohammed, "God."

It looked dark for the prophet and his religion. But the black-eyed man crouching in the blackness of the cave was full of hope and courage. Disaster did not daunt him; defeat did not pluck out the heart of his valor. Though cast down, he would not consent to be destroyed, and, rushing from his hiding place, he succeeded in eluding his enemies and finally arrived safely at Medina.

And then? Ah, then he assailed the men of Mecca with an argument that was as keen as their own—that sword of his which was not to stop flashing until Islam was one of the established powers of the world.

One year after he escaped from the cave, an outlaw with a price on his head, he and his little handful of followers met his would-be destroyers on the field of Bedr and gave them the beating that cleared the way to victory. There were other battles, but after Bedr the path of Islam was a steadily ascending one.

The outlaw prophet lived to see his religion established, and eighty years after his death Islam ruled Arabia, Syria, Egypt, Persia, the northern coast of Africa and Spain.

To-day 200,000,000 human beings, bowing daily toward Mecca, swear, "There is no god but Allah, and Mohammed is His prophet."
